HOPE FADES FOR CUT IN BANK RATE

Money supply rise boosts the £

By CLIFFORD GERMAN Financial Correspondent

THE pound soared by more than three cents yesterday to $1·3667, its highest level for a year, after a sharp rise in money supply figures killed off any lingering possibilities of an early cut in interest rates.

Sterling also forged ahead against other currencies reaching 4·03½ marks, and its trade-weighted average rose a full point to 83·2 per cent of the 1975 average, its highest level since early 1984.

The dollar eased sharply against all other currencies, as traders forecast early moves to cut interest rates in the United States.

It fell 2·45 pfennigs to 2·6 marks, its lowest since last September.

Sterling's strength followed the publication of money supply figures which showed sterling M3 — the measure of money supply which includes cash, current accounts and deposit accounts — rose two per cent, last month.

The rise was at the very top end of City forecasts, and brought the annual rate to 12 per cent, compared with the official target range of between five and nine per cent.

The figure sehave been heavily distorted by the applications for the Abbey Life share issue last month, but the Bank of England was unwilling to say by how much.

The narrower definition of money supply, MO rose by only ¾ per cent and its annual rate reached 5·1/4 per cent, but bank lending is thought to have risen by about £1·4 billion, another substantial rise.

Speculators confident

Currency speculators are confident that the figures will ensure a continuing high level of interest rates which will make the pound an attractive investment, against continental currencies and the dollar, especially if the American authorities are pressured into cutting interest rates to give the flagging United States economy a boost.

British Government fixed-interest stocks, which normally react adversely to continuing periods of dear money, stood up remarkably well yesterday and the City concluded that foreign investors were buying them in the hope of currency gains as well as continuing high yields.

Shares, however, fell again as the strengthening currency continued to evoke the competitive edge of British goods at home and abroad, and the value of profits earned abroad continued to dwindle.

The FINANCIAL TIMES 30-share index fell 19·2 to 952·0, its lowest level since Jan. 3, wiping an estimated £5 billion off the value of shares quoted on the London Stock Exchange.

Yesterday's events explain the cautious line Mr Lawson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has been taking on British interest rates but brought little comfort to employers or to the trade unions.

Sir James Cleminson, president of the CBI, and its top-general, Sir Terence Beckett, saw Mr Lawson again last night to press their case for Government action to cut interest rates.

Sir Terence said afterwards: "The Chancellor has stressed the need to control prices, but interest rates are themselves a price—the price of money. They influence the prices actually paid for goods and services. Houses and cars are two examples."

"It should also be understood that sterling against the mark now stands at a two-year high, and Germany is our best export market."

The CBI and the TUC meet the Government again today at the regular monthly meeting of the National Economic Development Council, both are expected to press the Chancellor once again to take his foot off the brake, where it has remained since the sterling crisis in January and February which forced base lending rates up 4½ per cent.

'RIGHT POLICY'

Public spending

JAMES WIGHTMAN, Political Correspondent writes: The Prime Minister told the Commons yesterday that it was still the Government's policy to restrain public expenditure and to make further reduction in income tax.

"We are following the right overall policy," she stated.

Restating her commitment to lower taxation rather than increased public expenditure, Mrs Thatcher said: "I do believe most people believe they are entitled to a larger share of their hard-won earnings for their own use."

She also stated that most people would prefer more net take-home pay to higher public spending. The only way to achieve that was to reduce taxation from an increase in growth in the economy.

PETROL PRICES MAY FALL

Petrol prices are likely to fall generally below £2 a gallon shortly because the strength of the pound against the dollar is cutting its cost which is in dollars, oil companies hinted yesterday.

In the Commons Mr Michael Latham, Conservative MP for Rutland and Melton, told Mrs Thatcher: "It is about time the Government called in the petrol companies and suggested that it is time they reduced their prices."

Labour 'safe defence'

By JAMES WIGHTMAN Political Staff

MR KINNOCK, declared last night in the naval city of Plymouth that Britain would be safer under Labour's non-nuclear policy than with the present Polaris submarine deterrent system and its intended Trident replacement.

He also accused the Government of running down conventional forces, especially the Royal Navy, to buy Trident from the United States.

The "uselessness of Polaris" had to be recognised, he said, adding: "It is a system which does not buy us a place in any conference, chamber or arms limitation talks, a system which is part of what Lord Carver, a former Chief of Defence Staff, calls 'the delusion of nuclear grandeur.'

"It does not impress potential enemies or influence established allies and it will not and cannot defend our country.

"That is why we say be rid of it. That is why we will cancel its replacement Trident. That is why we will clear our country of all nuclear weapons.

"And far from being defenceless we will be better defended for we shall sustain the strength of the Forces that we can use, the Forces that we can deploy, the Forces that meet our needs for security and our allies' needs for dependability."

Mr Kinnock, addressing a Labour rally, did not give a timetable for the implementation of a non-nuclear policy.

Labour Left-wingers would want the scrapping of Britain's independent deterrent and the closing of American nuclear bases in this country almost immediately on the party forming a government.

But Centre-Right MPs say that the transition could not be immediate and would have to be negotiated with Allies because of Labour's policy of continuing membership of Nato.

LOST GIRL, 9, DEAD IN DUSTBIN

By JOHN WEEKS, Crime Staff

THE body of nine-year-old Sarah Morris, who had been missing from her home in Morden, Surrey, for 24 hours, was found in a dust bin at her school last night.

Rubbish had been tipped on top of the baby to conceal it. The Home Office pathologist Dr Iain West carried out a post-mortem to establish the cause of death.

A man was later being questioned by detectives.

Sarah was found by police searching the grounds of Glastonbury junior school in Glastonbury Road, a quarter of a mile from her home in Garendon Road.

The fair-haired girl, one of a family of six, disappeared about 7 p.m. on Monday after going out to play in the street.

REAGAN BUDGET DIRECTOR RESIGNS

By Our Washington Staff

Mr David Stockman, President Reagan's budget adviser whose frankness in criticising official policy made him a celebrated White House heretic, is resigning at the end of this month, his official spokesman said yesterday.

His resignation comes as no surprise as the so-called, "Wunderkind" of the Reagan government has been in trouble with his White House colleagues, off and on for years because of his outspokenness.

Bonuses all round for M1 speed

By ROLAND GRIBBEN Business Correspondent

A 200-YARD stretch of the M1 in Hertfordshire will be re-opened today by Mrs Chalker, Transport Minister, five days ahead of schedule amid sighs of relief and bonuses all round.

The contractors, Balfour Beatty, stand to gain £200,000 for completing the £1·1 million contract comfortably ahead of Monday's completion date.

The Transport Department offered them a £40,000 incentive for every day the work was finished early. But they had to agree to pay penalties if they were late.

The 75-strong work force, which has worked around the clock to complete the reconstruction work on the north-bound carriageway close to Junction 8, has also picked up bonuses.

'Frightened

The work has been completed without the horrendous traffic jams forecast when the work, scheduled to take two weeks, began on July 2. This section of the motorway normally carries 140,000 vehicles a day, making it the busiest stretch of road in Britain after the M4 near Heathrow.

Motorists and lorry drivers have been "frightened off" by the advance warnings about lengthy delays and have used alternative routes.

Fine weather and the lighter-than-expected traffic have enabled the contractors to beat the deadline. "From our point of view it was quite a small job to undertake," said a company official yesterday.

The reconstruction has been on the last remaining original concrete section of the M1 opened 26 years ago.

More headaches

But the M1 headaches for drivers are far from over. The Transport Department said yesterday that work will start immediately on rebuilding a 2·9-mile stretch of the south-bound carriageway at Junction 14, between Milton Keynes and Newport Pagnell in Buckinghamshire.

The work is expected to take six weeks and although a contraflow system will operate with two lanes of trafic in each direction, the department warns: "Some delay to drivers is likely."

By CHRISTOPHER MUNNION in Johannesburg

AT LEAST seven blacks were shot dead and two seriously injured when police moved into the black township of Kwathema, near Springs, east of Johannesburg, to deal with a new upsurge of violence early yesterday.

Police said those who died were part of a rampaging mob which had thrown a petrol bomb at the home of a policeman and stoned other houses.

But residents said six were killed when police opened fire after throwing tear gas into a cinema where people were staging an all-night vigil after four earlier deaths, including youths killed by their own hand grenades.

Pit rebels in High Court fight

By JAMES O'BRIEN

LEADERS of the breakaway Nottinghamshire miners' union travelled to London last night to contest a High Court action, understood to have been brought by the National Union of Mineworkers.

Mr Roy Lynk, the general secretary, and Mr Neil Greatrex an area official, decided only late yesterday to attend the hearing.

Mr David Prendergast, the Nottinghamshire Area finance officer, would not confirm that the action was started by Mr Ray Chadburn, the Nottingham Area president, who also refused to comment.

Mr Lynk and Mr Chadburn had clashed earlier in the day when Mr Chadburn had tried to gain admittance to the union offices at Berry Hill, Mansfield.

The High Court action is understood to be an attempt to have the breakaway union declared illegal, according to one of the Nottinghamshire men still loyal to the NUM. It will be in the name of the sacked regional NUM general secretary Mr Henry Richardson.

Mr Chadburn, who has represented the NUM at various levels for 24 years, went against the moderate Area policy during the pit strike and urged Nottinghamshire miners to stop work. They rejected his plea.

As he arrived at the headquarters he brandished an NUM rulebook and declared: "I was elected president under these rules, not those of the breakaway union."

Mr Chadburn then tried to get into the building through a sidedoor but it was locked. A woman member of the reception staff said over the speaker system that she had instructions not to admit him.

Name change

At this stage the voice of Mr Lynk, one of the leaders of the new union came over the speaker. "Who is that?" he asked. "It's Ray," Mr Chadburn replied.

Mr Lynk: "You have had a recorded-delivery letter saying you are excluded from the building."

Mr Chadburn: "I have not received any letter. I shall seek legal advice. You are depriving me of personal documents and property."

With the brief and pointed exchanges over, Mr Chadburn returned to his NUM-owned car and said before driving off that he was prepared to work from a garden shed at his Warsop home for the national union.

Name changed

The breakaway miners decided yesterday after legal advice to drop their new name and remain as the National Union of Mineworkers Nottingham Area. They had originally called themselves the Nottinghamshire Union of Mineworkers.

The ownership of the headquarters, Berry Hill, at Mansfield and agreements with the Board are in the name of the NUM Nottingham Area, usually known as the Nottinghamshire Area NUM.

Christie's face U.S. inquiry

By TONY ALLEN-MILLS in New York

CONSUMER protection authorities in New York said yesterday they were considering taking action against Christie's auction house after an admission by its chairman, Mr David Bathurst, that the firm reported that two paintings had been sold when, in fact, they had not.

Mr Angelo Aponte, commissioner of the City's Department of Consumer Affairs, said: "We're looking at the case very seriously."

Under New York law auctioneers can be sentenced to one year in jail or fined $1,000 (about £750) for "having knowledge of" or "making" fraudulent statements to the public.

But city officials acknowledged there seemed no evidence that anyone had actually suffered from Christie's decision to announce sales that never took place.

Owner helped

Mr Bathurst told a Manhattan court last week — during a case won by Christie's — that the purpose of the deception was to protect the interests of the owner of eight impressionist paintings after seven of them failed to sell at a 1981 auction in New York.

Rather than upset the art market by announcing that seven out of eight works by important artists like Van Gogh, Degas, Cezanne and Monet had failed to sell, Mr Bathurst said, Christie's issued a false Press release to the effect that three paintings had been sold, for a total of $5,600,000 (about £4,200,000).

Yesterday Mr Timothy Gilles of the New York Attorney-General's office said: "It's unclear based on what's known whether any individuals were defrauded by this misrepresentation.

"However, if there are any individuals who were actually defrauded by this misrepresentation, who believe that this is an ongoing practice at Christie's, we would certainly encourage them to contact our office."

The only man who has made public a dispute with Christie's over the 1981 auction was the owner of the paintings, Mr Dimitry Jodidio of the Lausanne-based Cristallina dealership.

But Mr Jodidio's complaint was not directly concerned with the false Press release. He filed a suit claiming $10 million (about 7,500,000) damages on the grounds that Christie's had misled him into believing that his paintings were more valuable than they proved at auction.

Judge Eugene Wolin threw out Mr Jodidio's claim last week, ruling that Christie's had behaved perfectly properly in its estimation of the painting's

WORK-ON MINERS STILL FACE THREATS AND ASSAULT

By GERALD BARTLETT

MINERS who worked during the pit strike claim they are still being assaulted, intimidated and spat on in the street throughout the militant Kent coalfield.

Despite promises from senior Coal Board officials that victimisation would be stopped, wives and children of miners who worked at Kent's Betteshanger, Tilmanstone and Snowdown collieries still claim they are being abused.

Four months after the strike ended they are being jostled, stoned and cat-called in and around their homes, they say.

Houses being daubed with a combination of tar, creosote and flotation oil and windows being smashed at night by flying rocks are said to be commonplace in the mining communities in and around Dover and Deal.

Pet cats and dogs, it is claimed, are regularly wounded and maimed by bullies' heavy boots and working miners' vehicles are apparently sabotaged.

Screwdrivers are still apparently being rammed between the ribs of those who worked. Such incidents happen on the way up and down pit shafts in darkened cages.

"I can't prove it but I have had three potential buyers of my Deal house frightened off by nasties threatening to smash their windows and daub the house front if they buy a scab's property."

A "new and vicious" twist in the coalfield is the alleged use of schoolchildren to intimidate fellow pupils whose fathers were "scabs."

It is also claimed that "thugs" from the unemployment queues are being selected to abuse and cat-call working miners and their wives as they travel to and from their Kent homes.

Slums offered

Men offered transfers to pits away from their daily tormenters say that the Coal Board is offering them "appalling slums" to live in. Some claim that militants are threatening potential buyers of their Kent homes with daubing and broken windows so that they cannot be sold.

A young Tilmanstone miner said yesterday: "Transfer? . . . it's a bloody joke when you can't sell your home here and all you have in prospect, by the Coal Board's own admission, is a pit slum up north."

An innovation is the breaking open and wrecking of working miners' lockers and soaking their clothes in strong bleach.

A working miner who asked not to be named said last night: "Life is a living hell in Kent for the men who worked during the pit strike, their wives and children.

"The hate campaign against us is being carefully orchestrated by a handful of vicious miners." One man who held out against practically everything crumpled up when his kids started to be threatened with knives in the playground.

"Intimidation is rife and commonplace in this coalfield but it has come to a pretty pass when those responsible are even recruiting children and the unemployed to do their dirty work."

One of the saddest victims is Mrs Mary Smart, 56, who daily fears attacks on her husband, their Deal home and children and is taunted by neighbours.

She waits up until 2.30 a.m. every day in her Canute Road terraced home with two large walking sticks and a large bottle of bleach by her side.

Little prayer

Recently her husband Alec, 57, returned home from Betteshanger colliery where he loads trains and lorries at the tip, to find his home daubed in black oily sludge.

"It must have happened at about 5 a.m. and I was that angry that it all welled up here in my chest," said Mrs Smart, a grandmother and mother of three, last night.

"I felt so knotted up inside and angry that I had to come back in here to say a little prayer: basically 'If what we are doing is right please show us the way.'

"To disperse the anger we decorated the daubings with pretty crepe flowers and it became quite a tourist attraction."

Mrs Smart, whose epileptic daughter, Lorna, has twice, she claims, been attacked and left unconscious in the street, regularly receives silent telephone calls and is abused and threatened daily.

"All this does hurt me a great deal," Mrs Smart said. "People round here that are taunting us as scabby b's and worse are lads we've seen grow up from babies these past 30 years."

Silent calls

Her husband whose brother, Stanley, has not spoken to him since the strike began said: "Nobody is going to chase us away from here. I started work at Betteshanger and that's where I'll finish."

Mrs Irene McGibbon, 39, who led the Kent miners' back-to-work campaign, said at her home in Woolmer, near Deal: "Despite Michael Eaton's (the Coal Board spokesman) brave words to THE DAILY TELEGRAPH about stamping out intimidation way back in April, it still goes on unabated around here. . .

"The families of men who worked during the strike are still getting a rough ride at the hands of those who didn't. My family has to endure screams of filthy abuse every day; our home has been daubed with creosote many times and there are, of course, the silent phone calls.

"Every day without fail our family car is literally dripping with spittle as is the front of the house. Life is anything but pleasant but I will not be forced away from this part of Kent by these awful bullying yobbos.

"Day by day the conviction grows that this has all been Communist inspired and orchestrated and that this sort of intimidation will never stop until they are out-manoeuvred politically."

When Mrs McGibbon began the back-to-work campaign she and her husband, Robert, 48, a former car worker, knew that leaving his job at Betteshanger was a foregone conclusion.

Final nail

"We knew it was only a matter of time and when redundancies were offered we said 'yes'," said Mrs McGibbon. "I am very very relieved that Bob is now out of the coal industry."

Mrs McGibbon and the wives and families of tormented miners have decided to make a point of reporting every incident of house-daubing, smashed windows, threats and abuse to the police from now on.

"I know the police have got a very difficult job to do but we have got to hit back somehow," said Mrs McGibbon.

At Mill Hill, on the outskirts of Deal, Mr Christopher Woodcock, 36, a Betteshanger coal-face worker for the past five years, has finally given in to the tormentors.

"Life has just become absolutely intolerable and I can't take another second of it," said Mr Woodcock, who has had two ribs and a hand broken by mining bullyboys."

Home sold

"I have sold my home here, a former council terraced house, for £21,000 despite the blue and yellow paint daubed all over it and we are moving north.

"I can't tell you where it is but I will not spend every waking moment wondering whether my wife and children are being up or not.

"They are threatened and abused in the streets. They are spat at and children who go to the same school as mine threaten them with pen-knives because of my pit strike stand.

A 24-year-old underground labourer at Tilmanstone Colliery who asked not to be named for fear of reprisals, said: "My wife and I have had to take almost constant abuse and daily death threats because I worked during the pit strike.

"It's so bad that I can't take my wife into Deal to shop. We have to drive 15 miles to Ramsgate to avoid leering bullyboys and screaming harridans.

"I hope they close down the pits in this dreadful place. That's precisely what all these nasties deserve."

Mr George McAlpine, 55, general manager of the Kent coalfield, said last night: "I firmly believe that intimidation and harassment are receding in this area.

"But if anyone has a genuine on-going feeling that they are not getting a fair crack of the whip — and I mean a genuine feeling — then I would like them to write to me so that I can meet them and deal with the problem.

"We have had nothing reported to us at all for the month of July. I will certainly be looking at allegations that my officials are telling people not to report incidents of intimidation, but I would make no comment on that suggestion at the present time."

Pit mob appeal fails

A MOB which wrecked the control room at Dawdon Colliery, Co. Durham, during the pit strike, lost their plea for leniency in the Appeal Court yesterday.

The nine men admitted unlawful assembly when they appeared at Teesside Crown Court in March. Seven were jailed for two years and two received similar periods of youth custody.

Lord Justice WATKINS, sitting yesterday with Mr Justice BRISTOW and Mr Justice SAVILLE, said the court did not consider the sentences excessive. The appeal was dismissed.

Lord Justice Watkins said: "Throughout history the sound of a mob on the rampage is one of the ugliest and most frightening things to law-abiding people."

He said five of the nine were striking miners and no doubt inflamed by drink they became a mob.

He said what they did was made no worse or better by the fact that there was a miners' strike.

The nine are: RAYMOND PATTERSON, 24, of Stewart Street, Seaham; MARK ROCHESTER, 22, of Fox Street, Dawdon; KEVIN HUGHES, 20 of Mount Stewart Street, Seaham; JOHN LITTLE, 21, and his brother, BRIAN, 22, of Staverdale Street, Dawdon; STANLEY GREGORY, 22, of Staverdale Street; GARY KRISTENSON, 21, of Daphne Crescent, Seaham; GLEN BLACK, 22, of Dawdon Crescent, Seaham; IAN STEPHENSON, 18, of Helen Street, Dawdon.

Labour prepares to accept GLC axe

By JOHN GRIGSBY
Local Government Correspondent

THE LABOUR party and the unions are preparing to co-operate with the Government in handing over to boroughs and districts the jobs of the Greater London Council and the metropolitan councils.

These authorities will cease to exist on March 31 next year, under the bill approved in the Commons shortly before midnight on Monday.

Mr Kinnock, Labour leader, argues that if chaos follows the abolition of the G L C it would reflect badly on Labour councillors and might damage the party's chances in a General Election.

Mr Kenneth Livingstone, G L C leader, is expected to throw his weight behind the policy of co-operation.

Pressure in unions

There is also pressure within the unions to accept that the councils will be abolished and to get the best possible deal for their members.

Workers have become increasingly worried that they might be left without jobs if their unions do not move soon to negotiate conditions for the transfer.

The Government claims that abolition will save £100 million in administrative costs and estimates that it will eliminate more than 7,000 jobs in the G L C and the metropolitan counties of West Midlands, Merseyside, Greater Manchester, Tyne and Wear, West Yorkshire and South Yorkshire.

Six months behind

The current non-co-operation policy has already seriously disrupted the changeover. Mr Maurice Stonefrost, Director-General of the G L C, said recently that the Government's timetable was six months behind.

The Government has made a number of concessions on the Bill's progress through Parliament.

The most notable are that it will now be able to abolish the directly-elected Inner London Education Authority by Order and that a London Planning Committee of borough representatives will be formed rather than a commission with ministerial nominees, as was envisaged.

AN ELEPHANT'S ANORAK SNACK

The parents of 11-year-old Clare Bills are asking for £18 compensation from Dudley zoo after an elephant lifted her anorak out of her bag and ate it.

But Mr Joe Rowley, the zoo chairman, will not pay. "We always have plenty of signs near the elephants warning people to keep their coats and bags out of reach," he said. "Every precaution has been taken."

COUNCIL REVIEWS SECURITY

By KEITH NURSE
Arts Correspondent

THE British Council has undertaken a £400,000 review of security after the murder of two of its staff by unidentified terrorists in Athens last year.

The new arrangements, disclosed in the council's annual report published yesterday, included heavy expenditure on shatterproof glass, new doors, bag-scanning devices, search staff and, in some cases, structural alterations to premises to reduce points of access.

The costs for the year were £400,000 with an open ended commitment of £250,000 for future years. The council, which has 81 offices and 133 libraries abroad, has sought to keep its premises open to the public and at the same time reduce the risks.

Saving' requested

One shadowy group indicated last year that the council was a target because it was exporting British "cultural imperialism."

The council has formally asked the Foreign Office for the £1,100,000 "saving," imposed this year to be refunded. The cut could not be absorbed without damaging its operations.

Sir John Burgh, director-general, introducing the annual report at a Press conference in London, said:

"The British council plays a crucial part in trying to promote Britain overseas, to enhance our national reputation at times when it is quite badly damaged by incidents such as the football riots in Brussels.

"Because of this need we have asked the Government for a small increase in our grant in real terms over the next three years."

Britain was at the bottom of the cultural promotion league far behind France, which spent four times more than Britain in this area, Germany, the United States and Japan.

PIT TO CLOSE

Treforgan Colliery near Neath, West Glamorgan, is to close with the loss of more than 200 jobs, the Coal Board announced yesterday. It is the third pit closure announced in South Wales since the end of the miners' strike.

Legionnaire toll may have climbed to 46

A LEAKING seal in an air conditioning unit at Stafford District General Hospital could have caused the outbreak of Legionnaires Disease in April and May which developed into the world's worst, the investigation into the tragedy was told when it opened yesterday.

Mr ROBIN JACOB, Q C, Treasury Counsel, said it was possible that the death toll was 46, not 39 as originally thought.

Only 16 fatalities were known for sure to have been caused by the infection, but it could not be ruled out in the rest.

Mr Jacob told the hearing in Stafford that it was clear the £25 million hospital, opened in 1983, was the source of the infection.

"A possible cause is that the construction between the waste pipe from the cooling tower was such that the seal could break and there could be back-feed into a chiller unit of the air conditioning system."

The air conditioning for the out-patient section had been switched off over Easter. Bacteria possibly developed and was blown out over patients in the department when the system re-started in April.

Inadequate protection

Mr Jacob said traces of bacteria had been found in the cooling towers five months before the outbreak.

And Dr JOHN TOPIN, of Oxford University, told the inquiry he believes Government regulations drawn up five years ago to prevent outbreaks of the disease do not go far enough.

They advise health authorities to chlorinate hospital water systems twice a year, and whenever they had been closed down.

"I would be surprised that if you followed these guidelines and you had an infected cooling tower, you would be guaranteed to be totally free from the infection," said Dr Topin.

STRIKE AT 'TIMES' CALLED OFF

By MAURICE WEAVER
Industrial Staff

JOURNALISTS on the TIMES, in dispute over the relate dissues of pay and acceptance of new technology, voted by 174-76 yesterday to withdraw a threat to strike from 3 a.m. today.

But negotiators representing N U J members emphasised that there is still no agreement with management. Further talks are due today.

Two sides meet

The two sides met at the offices of A C A S to discuss the company's proposals concerning new electronic equipment. Later a refined formula was rejected in another ballot during a 3½-hour mandatory meeting. Voting was 95-65.

The company has offered five per cent. for the annual pay round plus a further 2½ per cent. for limited co-operation with new technology.

The union insists that introduction of the new equipment must initially be treated as a "research and development" operation. It must not involve compulsory changes in working practice and any agreement must be reviewable after six months.

Extra £200

Also tied to the technology issue is a proposed long-service scheme under which editorial employees would receive an extra £200 after one, three, five and 10 years service.

Problems of reaching agreement are further handicapped by a copyright dispute. The union says Times Newspapers, part of Mr Rupert Murdoch's News International group, wants too free a hand to use journalists' copy for syndication or data-base services.

RAMSEY OPERATION

The former Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Ramsey, 80, was recovering in hospital yesterday after an operation to remove a cataract from his right eye. Lord Ramsey had the operation at Sunderland Eye Infirmary, 12 miles from his home in South Bailey, Durham City.

POOL ROW LOOMS

By JOHN GRIGSBY

A SWIMMING pool built to international standards has not yet been opened to the public, more than 10 years after work began on a £27 million leisure centre in Brixton.

The first-floor pool in the new Brixton Recreation Centre has been leaking and although the centre was opened in March, the public has not been able to swim in it.

Now its condition could start a major row within the London Labour Party. Last year the Greater London Council bought the centre, estimated to cost £5 million when the project was first mooted in the 1970s, from the Labour-controlled Lambeth Borough Council for £10,500,000.

The centre will revert to Lambeth when the Greater London Council is abolished.

Lambeth's direct works organisation carried on the construction. Lambeth admits "technical problems" over the pool and is considering legal action.

An architectural assessment of the problems will be presented to a meeting of the G.L.C steering committee responsible for the project on July 18.

But Mr Paul Boateng, the Ghanaian-born chairman of the steering committee and chairman of the council's police committee, who is also prospective Labour parliamentary candidate for Brent South, is extremely unhappy about the saga.

He believes the facts should be brought into the open

Labour prepares to accept GLC axe

By JOHN GRIGGS
Local Government Correspondent

THE LABOUR party and the unions are preparing to co-operate with the Government in handing over to boroughs and districts the jobs of the Greater London Council and the metropolitan councils.

These authorities will cease to exist on March 31 next year under the bill approved by the Commons shortly before midnight on Monday.

Mr Kinnock, Labour leader, argues that it claims following the abolition of the GLC and councillors and might damage the party's chances in a future Election.

Mr Kenneth Livingstone, GLC leader, is expected to throw his weight behind the policy of co-operation.

Pressure in unions

There is also pressure from the unions, to accept that councils will be able to use their best possible for their members.

Workers have become increasingly worried that they might be left without jobs if their unions do not manage to negotiate conditions of transfer.

The Government claims that its abolition will save £100 million in administrative costs. It estimates that it will eliminate more than 7,000 jobs in the GLC and the metropolitan counties of West Midlands, Merseyside, Greater Manchester, Tyne and Wear, South Yorkshire and South Yorkshire.

Six months behind

The current non-co-operation policy has already seriously disrupted the changeover. Sir Maurice Stonefrost, Director-General of the GLC, said recently that the Government's timetable was six months behind.

The Government has made a number of concessions as the Bill's progress through Parliament.

The most notable are that councils will now be able to abolish directly-elected Inner London Education Authorities, and that a London Parliamentary Committee of borough representatives will be formed rather than a commission with ministerial nominees, as was envisaged.

PRETORIA ARMS PLOT ALLIES FACING JAIL

By KENNETH CLARKE

TWO Midlands business executives who became vital link-men in South Africa's lavishly-funded operation to circumvent the United Nations embargo on arms-buying were found guilty of a smuggling conspiracy yesterday at Birmingham Crown Court.

The jury had spent the night at a hotel before returning unanimous verdicts against DEREK SALT, of Westcliff Drive, Coventry, 61, managing director of a Coventry engineering company, and MALCOLM BIRD, 49 of Rushton Close, Balsall Common, Warwickshire, general manager at another Coventry factory.

In a month-long trial, both had denied conspiracy to evade the ban on exporting military equipment to South Africa.

They will be sentenced today with three other men who had pleaded guilty to the conspiracy — MICHAEL GARDINER, 56, from Colyford, Devon; MICHAEL SWANN, 54, company director, from Royston, Herts, and former business consultant HENRY COLES, 72, of Manor Park, Bath.

Mr Justice MARS-JONES told Coles he would not be sending him to prison and allowed him bail overnight, but remanded the others in custody.

The judge said that breaching the embargo "was a matter of the utmost gravity that must be punished by an immediate prison sentence."

Four absent faces

While the jury heard a great deal about the front companies which are an essential part of the South African conspiracy, they did not set eyes on four men who were central to the case.

They are HENDRIK JACOBUS BOTHA, STEPHANUS DE JAGER, JACOBUS LE GRANGE and WILLIAM MITTELERKAMP, who were arrested by Customs investigators and charged with the plot, but fled home, forfeiting £400,000 bail.

The subsequent diplomatic exchanges were suitably cool, compounded when the four surfaced at a Press conference in Pretoria at which they admitted operating as undercover agents for the previous five years.

Since no extradition treaty exists, they are beyond the reach of British law.

The Press conference was staged by South Africa's giant armaments corporation Armscor, and Botha, a former Army colonel, boasted that their arms-buying had saved their government at least £2·5 million.

Technology targets

The forbidden items they had been buying included parts for gun-sights, magnetrons used in radar, lead sulphide infra-red detectors used in heat-seeking missiles, tools for making detonators, and parts for South Africa's fleet of elderly Buccaneer aircraft.

Armscor's task is to keep the South African Defence Force supplied; considerable amounts of high technology components have to be imported because they are beyond the scope of the corporation's eight manufacturing subsidiaries inside South Africa.

Some of the illicit aircraft parts were forwarded under the cover story of being for the South African mining industry. But a number were sent back because of problems "that they were failing at 40,000ft."

Customs officials trapped the South Africans because they knew about the link and had been watching Salt, a frequent traveller to South Africa, and Gardiner.

Both had associations with the big British engineering firm, Redman Heenan of Worcester which, it was disclosed last year, had been allowed to escape prosecution for smuggling arms-making equipment to South Africa by paying penalties totalling £195,000.

That illegal trade, conducted by a subsidiary, was worth £2 million, but the main company board and executives knew nothing about it.

Friends and fixers

Salt, an experienced engineer, had worked with his father, in a company of toolmakers that became part of the Redman Heenan group in the 1960s, before he left to set up on his own.

He had known Gardiner for over 20 years. By the time he got involved in the South African trade, Gardiner was a director in Salt's prosperous engineering company, D. W. Salt of Coventry.

The South Africans arms buyers, amply funded and adept at wooing friends and fixers in influential positions, recognised the pair as valuable allies.

They could arrange for high technology-components to be supplied, using circuitous routes and a network of different companies to cover their tracks. Salt's exports to South Africa grew to be worth £600,000 a year.

Armscor kept him sweet with all-expenses paid trips and frequent payments in South African rands made through Gardiner, who was in fact the main procurer.

Tip-toeing away

When Customs men went to Gardiner's home in Devon they were waiting in a side room when they heard a noise, and investigator MARTIN SPILLANE went out into the hall to find Gardiner tiptoeing out, carrying a case and with a filing tray under his arm.

He claimed he had not actively sought trade in South Africa, but only dealt with inquiries that came to him and had been involved about five years.

The judge praised the Customs work in the case and told Mr Spillane: "I would like to congratulate you on a magnificent piece of detective work."

Gold dealers deny £¼m VAT fraud

SMUGGLED gold worth £1·6 million—much of it brought through a room at the Holiday Inn at Heathrow which was booked solid for two years—was used by two dealers to make a £240,000 profit from VAT evasion in six months, prosecuting counsel told Taunton Crown Court yesterday.

GLEN JARMAN, 37, of Gunnislake, Cornwall, and GEORGE BELL, 46, of Calstock, Cornwall, pleaded not guilty to six joint charges of duty evasion on gold, fraudulently evading VAT payments, and false accounting.

Harman also pleaded not guilty to three charges of supplying false VAT documents.

Mr CHRISTOPHER WILSON-SMITH, prosecuting, said the accused purchased a "ready-made" company, VAT registered, to sell the smuggled gold to London dealers, London Bullion.

It involved smuggling gold into Britain between May and September 1985. When they sold the gold, on which they had not paid duty, they charged 15 per cent. VAT but never paid the tax.

In an attempt to hide the source of their gold, the men melted down the bars and added other metals to make it look as though they were selling scrap. But the gold content was the same.

The source of the gold was mainly Switzerland and it was brought in by a man named Parolini through the Holiday Inn at Heathrow. The defendants arranged for a room there to be booked "not just for one night but for a solid two years," said Mr Wilson-Smith.

The trial was adjourned until today.

TV ACTOR IN FIGHT AT PARTY

MARK SAVAGE, the actor who plays Gripper, the school bully in the television series "Grange Hill," was always being challenged to fight because of his role, a court was told yesterday.

Savage, 20, of Nightingale Road, Harlesden, was involved in a fight at a party, magistrates in Swindon, Wiltshire, were told.

Savage's father told the court: "Whenever he goes to a party or is walking down the street, people are always calling him out to fight. He is always under great strain."

Mr BRIAN SMITH, prosecuting, said Savage was arrested after a party at Mr David Lomas's home in Dulverton Avenue, Swindon. Savage and Mr Lomas exchanged blows, Mr Smith said.

Drink blamed

"He was taking the micky out of me because of my being on television," Savage told the police. "It wouldn't have occurred if I hadn't been drinking."

"Savage broke two glasses by throwing someone back against a sideboard. Then he broke a window by throwing Lomas back against that. And he cracked the leg of a coffee table by simply lifting it up and throwing it across the room," Mr Smith said.

Savage who admitted an offence of criminal damage was fined £50 and ordered to pay £31 compensation.

CAMEL KILLING COSTLIER THAN KILLING A MAN

A British lorry driver whose passenger died when the vehicle hit a camel in Oman has been fined £3,560 by a local court for the death of the passenger and £5,350 for the death of the camel.

Details of the fines were sent by Oman police to a Truro inquest which yesterday recorded a verdict of accidental death on William Doer, 47, of Linden Avenue, Newquay, whose body was flown home for cremation.

The lorry driver, Mr Alan Ridley, 35, of Bishop Auckland, Co Durham, said in a statement that he was driving at night at about 45mph when the camel wandered in front of him. In the crash Mr Doer, who worked for Airwork Services, fractured his scull.

GIRL KILLED BY GOLF SPIKE IN THE HEAD

A 15-year-old girl died after being speared in the side of the head by a spike from a putting green hole while she walked in a park, an inquest at Newcastle upon Tyne was told yesterday.

Eileen Robson, of Coverdale Avenue, Blyth, Northumberland, who was with two friends, died five hours after the incident last Wednesday.

Insp. Kenneth Lumsden said a 16-year-old had been interviewed and released on police bail, and a report had gone to the Director of Public Prosecutions. The inquest was adjourned until Sept. 10.

DUKE'S CHEQUES CASE MAN FINED

Andrew Shellis, one of three men jailed over the theft of cheques from the Duke of Devonshire, was fined £700 at the Old Bailey yesterday when he admitted criminally damaging his wife's MG sports car with a hammer, causing £1,000 damage, during a row at their home in May, 1985.

Shellis, 45, a hairdresser, of Northolt Road, Harrow, is already serving two years for cashing two cheques stolen from the duke's Mayfair home.

Law grudge 'is no guide to sanity'

A 64-YEAR-OLD spinster, committed to a mental hospital because she believed she was being persecuted by the legal profession, won the support of three Appeal Court judges in London yesterday.

They gave Miss MARY WINCH the go-ahead to sue the doctors whose recommendations led to her spending a year at the North Wales Hospital, Denbigh.

Sir JOHN DONALDSON, Master of the Rolls, said that if everyone who had a grievance against lawyers was sent to a mental hospital, they would be fuller than they are already.

Miss Winch, who lived in Caernarvon, became involved in a dispute over her family estate when her mother died in 1972. She was committed to Risley remand centre, Warrington, in 1973 for contempt of court in refusing to part with documents connected with the estate.

'No review'

Three months later, protesting that a succession of solicitors had mishandled her inheritance claim, she was transferred to the mental hospital.

Yesterday she sought the Appeal Court's permission to sue Dr PAUL HAYWARD and Dr PAUL BISHOP, who diagnosed paranoia at Risley and recommended her transfer. She claims they did not take sufficient steps to investigate

Dr Hayward has since died. His estate will contest the claim. Also sued is Dr DAVID JONES, under whose care Miss Winch was placed

She alleges that he did not keep her case under review, and failed to have her discharged until she had been at Denbigh for a year.

Sir John, sitting with Lord Justice PARKER and Lord Justice BALCOMBE, ruled that Miss Winch's complaints deserved fuller investigation. The judges overturned a High Court ruling in October, 1984, that she had no case.

The 1983 Mental Health Act gives protection against "frivolous or vexatious litigation" to people working with the mentally ill, Sir John said. But it should not be used to deprive complainants of their rights.

Rumour of summer dismissed as speculation.

A MINISTRY spokesman today dismissed reports of the likelihood of summer this year as "reckless speculation."

"This is irresponsible scare-mongering," he said. "Just because February followed January and March followed February doesn't mean we're going to be faced with June, July and August coming along later. Things don't happen like that. If they did you can rest assured that we'd be the first to know."

One of those dissenting from the official view is Mr. Terry Sensible, financial director to a chain of High Street retailers.

"I'm putting in Toshiba air conditioning," he commented. "Their new ceiling units take up no space, are easily installed and, like all Toshiba units, come with a 3 year guarantee. Cool and comfortable staff are more efficient. It makes sound financial sense, especially when you consider that the Toshiba has a heat pump which also saves you money on your fuel bills in winter."

Could this bluff, North country, millionaire eccentric have a point? Only time will tell.

It pays to keep cool with Toshiba Air Conditioning.

Little hope for pets condemned in will

By LYN JENKINS

HOPES faded last night of saving the rest of a woman's pet collection from the same fate as seven red setters who were destroyed because of a clause in her will.

After an outcry over the dogs' deaths, the RSPCA won a temporary reprieve for the remainder of the spinster's menagerie.

There is a pony, a donkey, four pigeons, two canaries, two goldfish and two swarms of bees.

Miss Mary Mirehouse, 77, of Hawkesbury Upton, near Bristol, who died last week in her pony and trap, said in her will that the pets should be destroyed before her funeral.

The reprieve was gained when an anonymous RSPCA benefactor, believed to be a London lawyer, offered to indemnify the executors from any penalty incurred in not carrying out the order.

RSPCA pessimistic

Solicitors acting on behalf of the spinster's estate agreed to the reprieve while various proposals were discussed with the executors and beneficiaries.

But at least one executor is known to be firmly against failing to implement the conditions of the will. The RSPCA is therefore pessimistic about the future of the pets.

Mr Mike Smithson, an RSPCA spokesman said they were "appealing to the executors' humanity to follow what the public is saying—not to take on board this instruction."

He said they were also questioning the carrying out of the money and homes for the animals and had received scores of calls from people outraged at the will.

MOTHER DIED AFTER AIR TUBE ERROR

A MOTHER died of brain damage shortly after giving birth by Caesarean section because a vital air tube was wrongly positioned, an inquest was told yesterday.

Instead of being fed into Mrs Kay Morrow's throat, it lodged in her oesophagus, the passage which takes food to the stomach.

Her baby daughter was safely delivered during the routine operation at St Mary's Hospital, Portsmouth, but Mrs Morrow, 30, of Carnarvon Road, Gosport, Hants., was starved of oxygen for 25 minutes and died three days later.

Harsh breathing

Dr Mansukhlal Popat, anaesthetist registrar, told the Portsmouth hearing that he had difficulty inserting the tube into Mrs Morrow's air passage but on his second attempt he thought it was correctly positioned. Dr Popat said: "The patient's breathing became harsh and difficult after the insertion of the tube and her skin turned blue."

Dr John Young, consultant anaesthetist, said: "When I checked I could see quite definitely that the tube was in the oesophagus and not the larynx." He said Mrs Morrow had abnormally positioned air and food passages.

Mr John Glanville, the coroner, recording a verdict of death by misadventure, said it was not up to him to decide if there if there had been a lack of care or just a clinical misjudgment.

1985 A SUCCESSFUL YEAR

"This year has been one of intense activity, during which we have been able to concentrate on looking forward, making plans and redefining objectives in the light of the changing business environment.

The Society now has a very strong financial position and the directors are confident that we have the resources to meet the new challenges arising from the wider powers we are being given and to take full advantage of the opportunities that lie ahead." Jack Corrin, Chairman

ASSETS UP

During 1984/5 Anglia's total assets grew by over 16 per cent to £4,449 million, making us one of the top performing societies in the movement.

WHERE THE MONEY WENT

Lending during the year reached a record level of £969 million on over 45,000 new home loans and further advances. More than half of our new home loans went to first time buyers.

As part of our commitment to providing sheltered housing, the Anglia Housing Association was formed to facilitate direct financing of projects for the elderly and handicapped and other socially desirable schemes.

FOCUS ON THE CITY

A further £121 million was raised from the London money markets in 1984/5, mainly by the regular issue of Certificates of Deposit (Anglia was one of the first societies to introduce these) and by the acceptance of Time Deposits.

IN RESERVE

The General Reserve amounted to over £177 million representing 3.98 per cent of total assets, one of the strongest reserve positions among the major building societies.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE YEAR

- Total assets increased by 16·48% to £4,449 million
- Receipts from investors amounted to £2,457 million

Surprised?

NCR have taken the electronics previously contained on ten printed circuit boards and put them on a single chip.

This 32-bit chip is one of a set at the heart of our 9300/9400 computers. It increases their computing speed, lowers their price, enhances their reliability and reduces their size. Systems International says it's "undoubtedly the most exciting 32-bit chip set around."

The chip has so simplified our computers that they will operate in any normal office environment and have no need of a special power supply.

Which organisations as diverse as district councils, banks, machinery manufacturers and colleges of further education have all discovered. Keeping track of housing rents, payroll and housing benefits ... running a Eurobond Dealing and settlement system ... manufacturing and financial control ... teaching programming and word processing.

It's this kind of flexibility that makes NCR 9300/9400 computers ideal for a wide range of uses by small to medium businesses or branches of large companies.

They can support up to 80 terminals and are themselves supported by an extensive national network of field engineers, backed by the latest electronic aids.

NCR 9300/9400 computers can improve your efficiency in a thousand different ways.

That's hardly surprising. They're made by NCR.

JAPAN MAKES NEW MOVE TO AID IMPORTS

By A. E. CULLISON in Tokyo

A FURTHER package of measures centred around relaxed standards and eased certification systems for imported products was announced yesterday by the Japanese government.

The programme, part of a major overall package due to be released later this month, also includes other import streamlining procedures.

Also offered is a promise to buy $2,000 million worth of foreign goods under an "emergency import" plan.

Described by the Nakasone administration as an outline scheme for significantly reducing the nation's huge annual trade surpluses, it should cool rising frictions with Western Europe and North America.

The first part of the "action programme," announced last month, pledged to eliminate or drastically reduce tariffs on 74 agricultural and industrial items by April, 1987, and included 20 per cent. cuts in duties on another 1,800 products early in 1986.

Red tape cuts

If Japan's powerful civil servants give the programme full support, and this is not certain, the most recent moves should reduce the country's formidable bureaucratic red tape.

This effective web of tariff and non-tariff barriers to imports was largely why Japan's trade surplus with the E E C last year reached $10,200 million and an astounding $36,800 million with America.

Observers in Tokyo yesterday said the latest package seemed to support the theory that Mr Nakasone was hurrying the preparation of the outline because he wanted something substantial to take this week to Europe.

On Friday he is due to depart for Belgium, France, Italy and the E E C headquarters in Brussels.

It is understood that while in Europe he will stress that his administration will add to the final package over the next few weeks.

Attention will be paid to lowering hurdles regarding the restrictions to foreign inroads in Japan's capital and financial markets.

Although Mr Nakasone is believed to expect a series of difficult talks in Europe his advisers hope that his explanations will be accepted.

He intends to emphasise that, under his latest programme, Tokyo will enjoy less authority permitting the bureaucrats to intervene in the systems for approving imports.

Better treatment

Goods originating outside Japan will receive much better treatment at the nation's docks and airports.

In addition, foreign makers will be given a greater degree of freedom and responsibility in certifying their own products as they arrive in Japan's markets.

However, this permission will not apply to all products. For example, only around 70 of the 425 types of foreign electrical appliances currently approved will fall under this category.

Apparently, some 19 laws and ordinances must be revised to permit the measures. But officials suggest privately that there will be no delays worth mentioning.

Rebel stranglehold on bankrupt Mozambique

By JAMES MacMANUS in Maputo

SIXTEEN months after President Machel signed the Nkomati security pact with South Africa, Mozambique remains largely paralysed by rebels who have inflicted enormous damage on an already-weakened economy.

South African aid to the South Africa aid to the Mozambique National Resistance, the anti-Marxist rebels are keeping a tight grip around the capital.

Damaging hit-and-run attacks are being mounted on soft targets in all 10 provinces.

Western sources in Maputo say the capital is almost in a state of siege since roads north along the coast and west to the South African and Swaziland borders are regarded as dangerous, even in a military convoy.

The capital, with its large complement of foreign diplomats, is a prestige target for the rebels.

The industrial suburb of Matoma to the west has also been the scene of recent night-time sabtotage.

Ambush victims

The rebels, who seem to have no political programme beyond removing President Machel and the Government, also seem able to operate at will across the bay from the capital, at the ferry point at Catembe.

The flash and crackle of gunfire roll across the water at night to the Pomana Hotel as an occasional reminder to the families of diplomats and aid workers who make up the guest list that security around the capital is worse than ever.

Late last month that message was underlined when 66 people died in two ambushes north of the capital on the road to Manhica, one of the fertile areas that supply the city with what little food now reaches the markets.

All road travel from the capital is by military convoys but the rebel forces, using rocket-propelled grenades, has so far proved more aggressive and skilful than the Mozambique army.

Hard-pressed

Elsewhere in the country a picture emerges of sporadic and murderous rebel activity in which civilians are given no quarter and which never reaches the level of a large-scale action against regular troops.

The Government has had some recent successes and in the last week power has been restored to the second city and run-down port of Beira, after a two-month cut.

The road from the port to the Zimbabwe border 180 miles away is one of the safest in the country because of the several thousand Zimbabwe troops in the area.

Rail traffic has also just resumed from Nampuma, one of the main northern cities, to the Indian ocean port of Nacama but in the northern provinces the hard-pressed Mozambique army, whose strength on paper is 30,000 men, has been unable to secure any areas from attack.

Lack of pay, food, clothing and equipment have contributed to the army's poor record against the 12,000 hard-core rebels, according to observers.

Supply runs

The level of guerrilla activity, which has risen sharply around the capital since April, suggests the rebels are still receiving regular supplies of money and arms which the Mozambique Government believes are being flown in at night from airstrips in neighbouring Malawi.

In addition, small boats are reported to be making supply runs from the Comoro Islands at the northern end of the Mozambique Channel. In both cases the respective Governments have denied complicity.

The war and massive economic mismanagement have bankrupted the country to the point where merely servicing the foreign debt of around £3 billion would take 130 per cent. of the annual foreign-exchange earnings.

This is the crisis facing the Government which has led President Machel into a humiliating appeal for military help from neighbouring Zimbabwe and Tanzania.

KENNEDY HAS 'SINCERE REGRETS'

By Our New York Staff

Senator Edward Kennedy has told an interviewer that he has "sincere regrets" about past "times of indiscretion," but he is confident his children know about his "true value system."

"My life is filled with events and circumstances I'd change, and I have sincere regrets," he said in an interview to appear in the July issue of LADIES HOME JOURNAL. "Obviously there have been times of indiscretion, when mistakes were made, but I don't find looking back terribly useful."

He said he hoped his children would not "get caught up in" negative publicity about him. He also reflected on the loss of his two assassinated brothers. "I miss them," he said. "No day goes by when I don't."

REAGAN MOVE ON BUDGET IMPASSE

By Our Washington Staff

President Reagan started a series of meetings with key members of Congress yesterday in what was described as a make-or-break effort to end the continuing impasse over the 1986 budget

The President is supporting the Senate proposal to cut domestic programmes but allow defence spending to rise with inflation. The House measure would allow less for defence and refuse any reductions in social security cost-of-living adjustments.

ARGENTINA STUDIES INITIATIVE

By CRISTINA BONASEGNA in Buenos Aires

BRITAIN's removal of an import embargo on Argentina made the front pages of Buenos Aires newspapers yesterday and sparked a series of top-level government meetings.

In its main report, LA RAZON, the pro-government daily, said President Raul Alfonsin discussed the issue with Senor Dante Caputo, Foreign Minister, and Senor Roque Carranza, Defence Minister, on Monday night.

LA RAZON said that, before making an official statement on Britain's initiative, the Argentine government would consider such issues as a formal cessation of hostilities and the lifting of Britain's 150-mile exclusion zone around the islands.

'Positive' move

Congressmen were to meet Foreign Ministry officials to analyse the move despite yesterday's national holiday.

Representative Frederico Storani, head of the Lower House foreign affairs committee, told the DAILY TELEGRAPH shortly before the meeting: "Every initiative towards improving relations between London and Buenos Aires is positive.

"But there will be no possibility for re-establishing normal relations unless the key issue of sovereignty over the islands is included at least on an open agenda for talks."

The British Foreign Office statement on Monday said the move was aimed at improving bilateral relations but added that the issue of sovereignty over the Falklands was not for discussion.

Baroness Young, Foreign Office Minister, said she hoped Argentina would respond by taking a similar step.

CLARIN, the mass-circulation daily, said yesterday in a two-page report, that the Foreign Ministry had been expecting the announcement for at least two weeks, but the conservative LA NACION said the ministry's silence shared its surprise at Britain's move.

Mostly agriculture

According to official figures in Buenos Aires, Argentine exports to Britain in 1982, before the ban on mutual trade was imposed, totalled £167 million while British imports to Argentina amounted to £250 million.

Traditional Argentine exports to Britain were corned beef, corn, wool and leather. Agricultural products account for about 60 per cent. of Argentina's exports of about £6,160 million.

In an effort to increase foreign trade, Argentina is seeking new markets in Asia, Africa and Australia and has recently signed a beef export contract with Egypt.

Argentina's exports to the Soviet Union, mainly grain, account for over 20 per cent. of the country's total trade.

Moslem leaders agree Beirut peace formula

By NICHOLAS BEESTON in Beirut

LEBANESE Moslem political and religious leaders have concluded an ambitious security plan for Lebanon and Beirut after a day's conference in the Syrian capital of Damascus.

Lebanon's Prime Minister Karami read the 16-point statement early yesterday after 15 Shi'ite, Sunni and Druze leaders completed a conference chaired by Syria's Vice-President Khaddam.

The statement set out measures to tighten security in the predominantly Moslem West Beirut, including the Palestinian camps and the international airport.

Syrian observers will take part in a new nine-man security co-ordination committee, which will oversee the loosening of militia rule in Beirut and the strengthening of the Lebanese army units in the capital. Similar other initiatives for West Beirut have all failed.

The statement also criticised attempts by the Reagan administration to boycott Beirut airport, saying they were "out of malice" with the aim of revenge.

But the mainstay of the agreement, hammered out in two sessions lasting 11 hours, attempted to deal with the growing bitterness between Moslem militias.

Hit-and-run

Only hours before Prime Minister Karami read out his statement, Druze Progressive Socialist militiamen battled with Shi'ite Amal fighters and later Amal came under attack from Sunni Moslem gunmen in what have now become nightly hit-and-run raids.

In the northern port of Tripoli, fighting continued between Sunni Tawheed (unification) militiamen and the Syrian-backed Arab Democratic party.

A senior Government source, speaking from the Presidential Palace in Baabda, said yesterday's agreement had rekindled the political process for a peaceful solution in Lebanon.

"Syria is now alone on the Lebanese battlefield, it is not going to be easy but they have the power to bring about a peaceful solution to the Lebanese crisis," said the source, who asked not to be named.

He approved the principle agreed by the Druze leader Walid Jumblatt and his Shi'ite counterpart Nabih Berri that their militiamen should be taken off Beruit's streets and their weapons removed, but cast doubt on the permanency of such a move.

Put to test

The difference with this peace formula, the official pointed out, was that it was backed by Syrian guarantees.

"Syria's reputation and prestige is at stake," he explained, adding that any Damascus initiative in Lebanon would come up against opposition groups in Lebanon affiliated to the Palestine Liberation Organisation, Libya, Iran and Israel.

The effects of the latest move for a peaceful solution to Lebanon's 10 years of strife are expected to be put to the test in 48 hours when Prime Minister Karami heads the first meeting of the co-ordination committee.

It remains to be seen if Lebanon's Moslem leaders can or are willing to live up to their commitments once they return from Damascus.

Israel's union leaders plan general strike

By JOHN BULLOCH in Jerusalem

ISRAELI trades union leaders were preparing last night for a general strike that they said would begin next Sunday, the first day of the Israeli working week.

Strike action was decided on by 13 powerful works councils.

It was then endorsed by the Histradrut, the Israeli trades union federation, which fears that if it did not give its approval it would lose its power among the country's 1,500,000 workers.

Yesterday civil servants throughout the country closed Government Ministries and offices, telephone workers refused to do repairs and crews of merchant ships stopped cargoes being loaded.

The wave of strikes, with more to come over the next few days culminating in Sunday's general stoppage, is aimed at preventing the Government pushing through an austerity programme designed to bring inflation down from 400 per cent. a year to about 30 or 40 per cent.

Faced with mounting opposition, Mr Peres, Prime Minister, has already agreed to hold up planned sackings of 10,000 government workers and wages cuts while discussions go on with union leaders.

MURDER SUSPECTS Houses flattened

MAIER ASHER in Jerusalem writes: The Army yesterday bulldozed two houses in the Arab village of Taurif, near Hebron, after suspected terrorists were rounded up in connection with the murder of a Jewish couple in a forest south of Jerusalem on June 27.

Curfew was imposed on Taurif and bulldozers protected by troops entered the village. Families from two houses evacuated and the buildings belonging to the suspects were razed.

FINANCIER'S BODY TO BE RELEASED

The body of Mr William Russell, 44, a London financier, who is thought to have fallen to his death from a Majorca hotel in February, is to be released for a funeral after months of delay.

Mr Edward Carlyon, Truro coroner, resuming the inquest yesterday, said that, after delays and requests that they be expedited, reports had now been received from the Spanish police and from the doctor in Majorca who examined Mr Russell's body. He adjourned the inquest until September, when he will sit with a jury.

TERRORISM REMINDER TO ALLIES

By FRANK TAYLOR in Washington

PRESIDENT Reagan has called on allied governments to live up to a resolution they signed at a Western summit seven years ago, pledging concerted action against terrorism.

In diplomatic exchanges, Washington has told Britain, France, West Germany, Canada, Italy and Japan that it needs their backing for Mr Reagan's call for a boycott of Beirut Airport following the T W A skyjacking.

American officials seem embarrassed by the unenthusiastic response so far. Mrs Thatcher has come out in support but said Britain would only act in conjunction with other European governments.

The resolution said where a country refused extradition or prosecution of those involved in a skyjack the seven nations should act to cease all flights to that nation and initiate action to halt incoming flights from the country.

Apart from the allies' lukewarm response, Mr Reagan's proposal has incurred the wrath of the Arab world. It says it is unjust to punish Lebanon when the Lebanese government was powerless to end the skyjacking.

But the Americans seem determined to press ahead with isolating Beirut Airport and the plan is expected to be raised in Bonn later this month, when the Western powers' special committee on terrorism meets.

Scathing reaction

The State Department has meanwhile received scathing reaction from some of the governments named by Mr Reagan on Monday as belonging to a "confederation of terrorist states." The list included Iran, Libya, North Korea, Cuba and Nicaragua.

Dr Castro, the Cuban leader, described Mr Reagan as "the worst terrorist in the history of mankind" whose ideas were from the era of Buffalo Bill.

"It is Reagan who supports the genocidal army of El Salvador, the rapists of American nuns," said Dr Castro. "Reagan ordered the mining of the harbours of Nicaragua. It was Reagan who sent troops to invade little Grenada."

In Washington, the Nicaraguan Embassy said: "Our people are suffering the scourge of U.S. state terrorism, openly promoted by the Reagan Administration and executed through the C I A."

Libyan Radio said those countries named by Mr Reagan were the ones that were trying to oppose America's own terrorist policies.

In his speech on Monday the President also denounced Nicaragua as a haven for international terrorists, including members of the I R A. Officials who were questioned yesterday declined to say what evidence there was to support the charge.

TEARGAS AND GUNFIRE IN 'PEACEFUL' POLL

By IAN BALL in Mexico City

THERE were some efficient kidnappings of candidates, tear gas was used in places and gunfire echoed around a few polling stations, but none of the 35 million potential voters, as far as is known, was killed in Mexico's national elections.

The electorate yesterday was ready to accept at face value the Government's assurances that the exercise in democracy had been carried out on the whole in an atmoshpere of "peace and tranquility."

The major violence many had feared did not develop. It was, however, an election Mexican-style.

Exactly how many "tacos" turned up in ballot boxes will never be known. Between elections, "tacos" are the familiar tortilla-based Mexican snack. When the country goes to the polls, however, the word takes on a new meaning—illegal ballots.

"Tacos" are among the reasons that the same political group, the Institutional Revolutionary party, has been voted back into office without interruption for the past 56 years.

An exasperated would-be opposition, the Conservative National Action party, this time made a special effort to persuade European and American journalists to monitor the congressional elections and the governorships for seven of the 31 state seats.

The Conservatives, as well as officials of the various Leftwing and Marxist parties, were on hand to point out mishaps and irregularities as they occurred at the voting places. These are some examples:

In the city of Agua Prieta on the American border, supporters of the National Action party exercised their democratic right to abstain from voting when they discovered the polling stations had been switched from the usual schools and public buildings to the homes of officials of the Institutional Revolutionary party.

In Monterrey, Mexico's surging industrial city and the home of many of the country's most brilliant entrepreneurs, the Conservatives reported one of their candidates and the president of a local party branch had been kidnapped in separate incidents on election morning.

A police car, they alleged, drove off with their candidate. A local spokesman for the Government party denied all knowledge of the abductions and offered this memorable rhetorical question when the matter was raised by the Press: "Is that going to help us with the elections?"

Twenty supporters of the National Action party were arrested in San Luis Rio Colorado, in the northern state of Sonora, after they destroyed 48 ballot boxes in an act of protest. They alleged the boxes were already filled with marked ballots when the polls opened.

In a suburb of Monterrey, four political banditos carrying pistols and machine guns broke into a closed polling station and made off with ballot-filled boxes.

In the southern state of Chiapas, where Guatemalans are constantly trying to sneak across the border, giving Mexico its own version of the "wetback" problem, the allegation was that the Institutional Revolutionary party was offering naturalisation papers to any illegal alien promising to vote for the Government's candidates.

In a district of Pueblo Yaqui the Government candidate won 400 votes and Senor Adalberto Rosas, the Opposition candidate, got none. "This would mean that even my relatives did not vote for me," said a glum Senor Rosas.

In the more sophisticated north, some Opposition newspapers were using computers to monitor voting results in the belief that the print-outs would offer unassailable proof of Government hanky-panky.

But the party in power also had its computers. When the Opposition in the state of Nuevo Leon accused the Government of failing to correct voting lists containing "thousands" of fictitious names, the official explanation was that a computer had run amok.

The detailed results of the vote-count, or miscount, will not be announced until Sunday. All Mexico, however, already knows the Government has won hands down.

Kremlin sign of friendship to Peking

By HUGH DAVIES in Peking

YAO YILIN, the Chinese Vice-Premier, travelled to Moscow yesterday in the wake of new signs that Mr Gorbachev wants to find a way to mend some fences with Peking.

Mr Gorbachev's surprisingly perfunctory treatment in Moscow of Le Duan, Vietnamese Communist party general secretary, whom he persuaded to endorse the Sino-Soviet process of normalisation, is being taken to signal that he wanted to set the stage for the Yao visit.

Hanoi and Peking, bound to each other like "the lips to the teeth" until a few years ago, are sworn enemies. Conspicuously missing from the Vietnamese-Soviet joint declaration was the usual disclaimer—that normalisation would not be at the expense of a third country.

Soviet presence

With Peking now indicating it would not object to a Soviet presence in Cam Ranh Bay, the American-built naval base in Vietnam, if Moscow pressured Vietnam to withdraw troops from Cambodia, some movement on ties with the Kremlin is expected during Yao's eight-day visit.

However, Huan Xiang, a senior Chinese foreign policy advisor, has told Western reporters that he doubts relations with the Kremlin will ever return to the halcyon days of the 1950s.

Perhaps, significantly, Yao is visiting Russia just before talks in Washington between President Reagan and Chinese President Li Xiannian.

Afghan army mauled in guerrilla offensive

By M. AFTAB in Islamabad

THE Afghan army is reported to have lost two battalions in a prolonged offensive on the anti-Marxist guerrillas of the Mujahideen, and a major Communist convoy has been destroyed.

Against a background of increasing desertions, the Afghan army has suffered a severe mauling, with 500 soldiers reported killed in the strategic Panjshir valley, north of Kabul.

In the beleagured capital itself, guerrillas fired at least 25 rockets, two of them hitting the Soviet Embassy compound, killing six guards. Another rocket which landed in a suburb killed six Afghan soldiers.

Soviet and Afghan forces responded with massive artillery and rocket fire at guerrilla strongholds around Kabul over four nights.

In the convoy attack, the guerrillas knocked out 150 Soviet and Afghan lorries, mostly fuel tankers, north of the Salang pass in the Hindu Kush, capturing 150 Afghan soldiers.

Helicopters were later seen ferrying wounded to hospitals in Kabul.

Paid tolls

The convoy attack near the Salang tunnel was the first big rebel raid since April on Afghanistan's northern highway, linking Kabul to the Soviet Union. Diplomats said the highway was closed to civilian traffic for six days.

A beer lorry driver who drove past the wrecked convoy when the road was reopened said he had to pay tolls to young Mujahideen guerrillas.

In the nearby Panjshir valley, base for many of the rebels attacking the highway, guerrillas were also reported to have attacked an Afghan military police convoy.

Diplomats cited unconfirmed reports of 200 Soviet and 500 Afghan soldiers being killed in the valley during the last few weeks.

They also quoted Kabul sources as saying death and desertions in the increased Panjshir fighting had reduced the Afghan army's crack 444th commando brigade to 20 per cent. of its normal strength.

Other unconfirmed reports said the army's eighth division had lost more than 1,000 men the same way, they added.

The same sources said that according to rumours in Kabul, the Panjshir guerrilla leader Ahmed Shah Masood had offered to exchange his Soviet and Afghan prisoners estimated to number about 500, for about 2,000 guerrilla captives.

In the Shaomali region all civilian passengers on a lorry, including six members of the same family, were killed last week when a Soviet tank crushed it.

EEC clarity talks end with confusion

By JOHN LICHFIELD in Luxembourg

THE inaugural attempt by Common Market Finance Ministers in Brussels to apply new procedures to bring clarity and discipline to Community finances has ended amid confusion.

The minister fixed a £16,800 million ceiling on overall community spending next year and a £11,750 million ceiling on the Common Agriculture Policy.

These figures compare with a £18,860 million 1986 budget sought by the European Commission, including £11,900 million for the agriculture policy.

But the ministers reached no conclusion on whether the limits should apply only to Common Market spending in the existing Ten countries or to spending in Spain and Portugal, who join in January.

More arguments

They similarly dodged the question of whether the ceiling should check Brussels' plans for a £1 billion surge of delayed Community spending on poorer regions and the unemployed in 1986.

With these questions unanswered, Brussels officials say the "limits," could start more arguments than they solve when the budget is negotiated line-by-line this year.

The new "budgetary discipline" procedure was agreed as part of a package deal giving a permanent increase in Common Market revenue and annual rebates to Britain.

I was presented mainly as a mechanism for restraining spending on the agriculture policy. Ironically, it is more likely to depress spending on other community policies.

The farm-spending figures arrived at by the commission and the finance ministers are broadly similar.

ANGER AT GANDHI TRIAL

By BALRAM TANDON in New Delhi

THE trial of three men accused of conspiring to assassinate Mrs Indira Gandhi, got off to a troubled start in Delhi's Tihar jail yesterday as one witness accused the government's lawyers of forcing him to make a statement.

Virendra Singh, listed as one of 144 prosecution witnesses, has produced before Mr Mahesh Chandra, the judge, Mr P. P. Grover and Mr N. Lekhi, the principal defence lawyers. They demanded that the man they will now present as a defence witness be protected.

The judge said he could wait in a separate room and be escorted out in a car. There were then heated arguments when the prosecution accused the defence of smuggling Virendra Singh in as "an attendant."

Later a black revolver, said to have been used to kill the Prime Minister, was produced at the trial of three Sikhs.

Dharam Singh, Indira Gandhi's security guard, said the service revolver and 18 bullets were handed to Mrs Gandhi's Sikh bodyguard Beant Singh, a few hours before she was shot.

The prosecution claims Beant Singh and another Sikh guard, Satwant Singh, 22, were the killers. Beant Singh was reported to have been killed by security forces moments after the assassination last October.

Two other Sikhs, Balbir Singh and Kehar Singh, have been charged with conspiracy to murder.

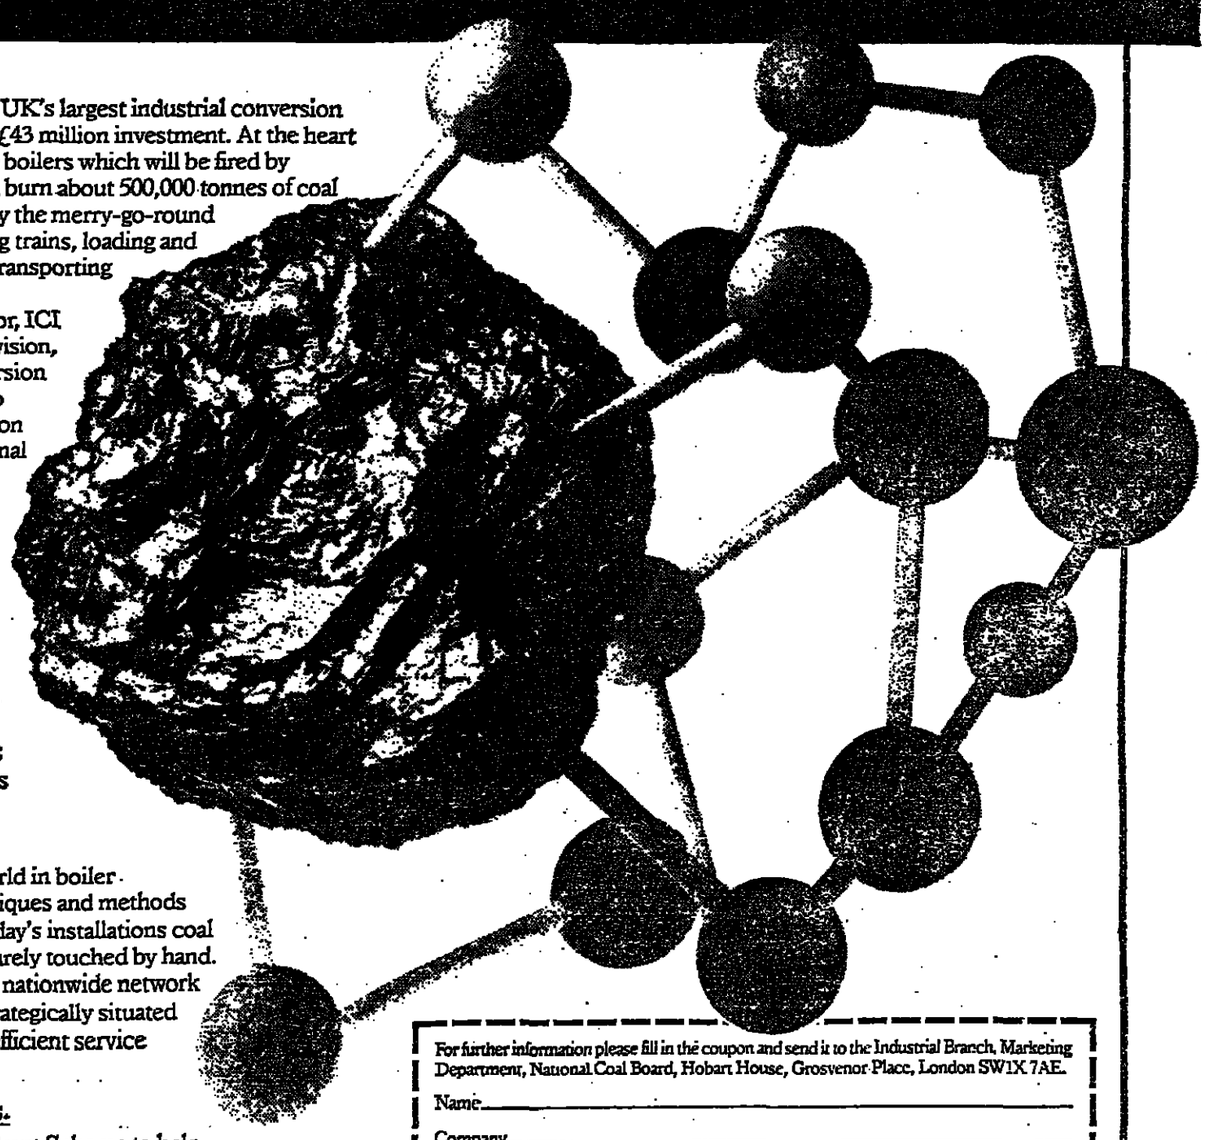
BRITISH COAL. THE RIGHT CHEMISTRY FOR ICI



ICI have announced the UK's largest industrial conversion to coal at its Wilton plant — a £43 million investment. At the heart of this complex are water tube boilers which will be fired by pulverised coal. The plant will burn about 500,000 tonnes of coal a year. This will be delivered by the merry-go-round system of continuously moving trains, loading and unloading on the move, each transporting 1000 tonnes.

Herman Scopes, Director, ICI Petrochemical and Plastics Division, says: 'We at ICI believe conversion to coal is important if we are to improve our competitive position in both national and international markets.'

What makes sense for companies like ICI, Express Dairy, John Smith's and British Aerospace also makes sense for any other company that wants to improve its competitive edge.

The cheapest source of energy.

British coal costs less than other fuels. And the NCB intend to make sure coal prices remain competitive.

World-beating technology.

British coal leads the world in boiler technology, combustion techniques and methods of coal and ash handling. In today's installations coal and ash are seldom seen and rarely touched by hand. To maintain supplies there is a nationwide network of coal distributors who are strategically situated to give advice and provide an efficient service to industry.

Real help with conversion costs.

There's a Government Grant Scheme to help companies who want to convert to coal. This, with the backing of European loans, creates a really attractive financial package.

A final word from Malcolm Edwards, Commercial Director of the NCB: 'We believe British coal can save energy costs for your company. Let us talk — we can do good business together'.

TIELESS POSTMAN FAIRLY SACKED

Mr Hugh Blaik, a postman, was justifiably sacked after refusing to wear a tie, an industrial tribunal ruled yesterday. He had claimed unfair dismissal and sex discrimination.

Mr Blaik, 53, of Handsworth Gardens, Armthorpe, Doncaster, said women workers were issued with ties but did not have to wear them. He said he worked near moving machinery where a tie could be dangerous. The Post Office said he was dismissed for a defiant attitude and insubordination.

CLAIMS INQUIRY

The House of Commons Energy Committee is holding a public hearing at Mansfield Town Hall, Nottinghamshire, next Tuesday to hear evidence about the processing of claims for compensation for subsidence damage to local properties caused by mine working.

WORST DRUNK DRIVERS FACE 'RE-LICENSING'

By TERENCE SHAW Legal Correspondent

HIGH-RISK drink and driving offenders are beginning to receive notices from the Department of Transport warning them that they will not recover their driving licences without a medical examination for a drink problem.

A spokesman for the Driving and Vehicle Licensing Centre at Swansea said a handful of notices had now been sent to the first motorists to come within the scope of the scheme that came into operation in May, 1983 for checking drivers with a possible drink problem.

They are being warned that to get their licences back they face medical assessment and an extended interview at one of 10 Department of Transport centres being set up.

They are also receiving literature with advice about taking steps to control their drinking, and where they can go for help.

Within two or three months of the end of their disqualification period, drivers in the high-risk category will be invited to attend their medical assessment and interview by a doctor appointed by the Department of Transport.

Two offences

They will be asked to allow the Department's doctor to contact their own G P, and to give a blood sample for examination at the Isaac Woolfson Research Laboratory in Birmingham.

The Department's doctor will then advise the Minister on whether the driver suffers from a disability likely to cause his driving to be a danger to the public.

There is provision for an appeal to a magistrates' court in England and a sheriff in Scotland against a refusal by the Minister to allow the driving licence to be restored.

The administrative scheme to protect the public from high risk offenders was devised after the Blennerhassett Committee report on Drinking and Driving had recommended that problem drinkers should not only suffer disqualification but remain disqualified until a court decided that their driving no longer presented an undue risk.

The scheme applies to anyone disqualified twice within 10 years for driving with more than two and a half times the legal limit of alcohol in the body, or alternatively once for driving at more than two and a half times the legal limit and once for failure to provide a specimen for analysis.

Drivers convicted of driving with more than two and a half times the legal limit can normally be expected to be disqualified for much longer than the minimum one year. Two years is a not-uncommon penalty.

So with the scheme only coming into force in May 1983, only a handful of drivers have so far acquired a second conviction bringing them within the scope of the scheme.

A spokesman for the D V L C at Swansea said it could be after May next year before the assessment machinery gets under way. By the time it is fully operational it is expected to be dealing with about 2,000 cases a year.

Last week in a Commons written answer, Mrs Chalker, the junior Transport Minister, said that in the light of experience of operating the scheme she would be considering extending its scope, such as by lowering the threshold for investigation.

Proud recipient of the Florence Nightingale Medal in London yesterday was Nurse Diane Ryding, 33, of Leatherhead, Surrey, who received it from Countess Mountbatten of Burma, vice-president of the British Red Cross Society. Nurse Ryding has spent the last six months working in Ethiopia.

Ambulance service 'too slow'

MORE THAN 2,500 lives are at risk on the streets of London each year because the capital's ambulance service is failing to respond to 999 calls within officially recommended times, unions said yesterday.

Ambulances should leave their station within three minutes of a 999 call and arrive at the scene of the incident within seven minutes, the trade union staff side said.

But in the case of the London Ambulance Service "only 45 per cent. of calls meet these standards. Of the rest 50 per cent. of 999 calls are delayed up to three minutes and five per cent. by six minutes or more."

The warning was delivered by the four ambulance trade unions, who said they had been monitoring the performance of the London Ambulance Service in dealing with emergency calls.

Increased demands

The unions blamed Government cuts, the closure of accident and emergency departments and heavy traffic for the increased demands on ambulances.

In a statement they said: "Any delay could be critical, and means that life-saving skills and equipment of L A S personnel cannot be deployed effectively."

Assuming that one per cent. of calls to the ambulance service are critical, the unions calculated that 2,285 would be delayed by up to three minutes. They said 229 people in a critical condition could be kept waiting for more than 20 minutes.

AN UNDERWATER TICKLE IS LEGAL

New fishing bye-laws announced yesterday by the Southern Water Authority remove archaic restrictions on tickling and groping under river banks for fish.

The 16 new rules were drawn up after consultations with angling clubs, fishery owners and the Ministry of Agriculture.

CBI advocates fairer deal for tourists

By ROLAND GRIBBEN Business Correspondent

MORE jobs and earnings could be generated from tourism by changes in Government policy and rolling out the red carpet to make foreigners more welcome, said a report released yesterday by the Confederation of British Industry.

Licensing and shop hours should be relaxed, planning red tape reduced, regional development grants extended to the industry and a senior Minister given the job of co-ordinating a tourism drive, said Prof. Rik Medlik, the author.

He criticised people who moaned about the number of tourists already coming to Britain, and also expressed concern about tariff rises introduced by some "greedy" London hotels cashing in on the tourist boom.

Prof. Medlik said: "There are too many people who enjoy nothing better than package holidays in Continental resorts, yet resent it when they find themselves surrounded by foreign tourists in London or Stratford-on-Avon."

He feared that the greed of some London hotels could result in the "infection spreading" to other parts of the country.

"They are just charging what the traffic will bear and currently the traffic will bear a lot."

The report, while underlining the jobs potential, warns the Government against building up hopes that a tourist drive could produce a substantial number of new jobs.

Prospect for jobs

Prof Medlik, a leading authority on tourism and a visiting professor at Surrey University, said his study refuted conventional thinking that tourism is labour intensive, needs little capital and had a low productivity rate.

The C B I commissioned the report last year as part of a programme to explore ideas to reduce unemployment.

But Prof Medlik's findings are likely to reinforce industry's arguments with the Government about relying too heavily on the service industries as the main new jobs generator.

Lord Young, Minister without Portfolio and the government's jobs Minister, is currently carrying out a parallel study into the prospects for creating more jobs from relaxing controls on the tourist industry.

An estimated 950,000 are directly employed in tourism and last year earnings from foreign tourists as well as British holidaymakers were estimated at £14 billion.

The Medlik report says that to achieve growth and help prepare for the time when North Sea oil revenues start to run down the Government should produce a comprehensive tourism policy.

'Flying police' better than national force

By JOHN WEEKS Crime Staff

MUTUAL aid arrangements between police forces to deal with picket line violence during the pit strike have decreased the need for a separate police riot unit and are a positive argument against a national police force, the Chief Inspector of Constabulary said yesterday.

In his annual report, Sir Lawrence Byford said the formation of a special police force to cope with public disorder would be more than the country could afford, and it would be susceptible to political influences.

But he said drug addiction represented the most "serious criminal threat to society during the second half of this decade."

While traffickers were making fortunes, addicts were increasingly committing crime to finance their habit.

Sir Lawrence said he had often been asked why Britain was almost the only European country without a "third-tier" force such as the French CRS riot squad.

The mutual aid arrangement where police forces were able to get additional police resources from neighbouring constabularies showed a specialist group was not needed.

'Sensitive work'

"There are in my view other equally-sound arguments against establishing a third-tier force. One is that we cannot afford to have a large body of law enforcement officers kept in reserve for public order situations.

"Another is that such a force would come under centralised control and might consequently be more readily susceptible to political influence."

Sir Lawrence said the miners' dispute had caused disharmony to police-public relations, and much "sensitive work" was needed to remedy the situation.

He said the level of racial incidents throughout the country continued to give cause for concern.

At the end of 1984 there were 120,575 police officers in England and Wales, and the annual cost of the police service stood at £2·7 billion.

DEBT ADVICE AGENCY SOUGHT

By LIN JENKINS

DEBTS generated by a credit society have combined with high unemployment and means that an independent money advice service is urgently needed, says a report out today.

Existing options for those crippled by debt are inadequate and leave ordinary consumers to fund costly debt collection and written-off arrears, adds the Welsh Consumer Council.

The discussion document "A Money Advice Service for Wales" says that creditors should set up a central service to allow an individual's finances to be viewed as a whole rather than on a one debt at a time basis.

A central body would reduce the psychological pressure on those in trouble facing "harassment of debtors, threats of imprisonment and court action by over-zealous creditors determined to recoup their money quickly," says the report.

'Left too late'

Creditors would save on their own debt-collecting costs and avoid the necessity for expensive court action.

A study by the council suggests that the majority of those seeking help already face the problems over five or more bills totalling an average of about £2,000.

A council spokesman said: "People leave it too late to seek help, and those on hand are trained to deal with affluence rather than poverty."

Miss Katherine Hughes, council director, said: "The objectivity of an independent third party is needed. Debtors' fear and creditors' natural primary interest to get their money as quickly as possible hamper the solution of debt problems."

The council, which says the problem is a national one, plans to hold discussions with interested parties to see if a voluntary solution can be reached.

£330,000 AWARD FOR CAR VICTIM

Pauline Warren, 40, who must spend the rest of her life in a wheelchair after a car crash, was awarded £330,000 damages in the High Court yesterday. She was a passenger in a B M W in Welwyn, Herts, in February, 1981, which hit a concrete pillar.

Pauline, of the Avenue, Welwyn, sued the car driver, Mr Malcolm Knox, of Edwards Close, Gidea Park, Romford, East London. He admitted liability and was ordered to pay the agreed damages and costs.

ITV PRESS ON WITH MORNING SHOWS PLAN

By Our TV and Radio Correspondent

The ITV companies decided yesterday to ask the Independent Broadcasting Authority for permission to go ahead with their plan for morning television programmes in the autumn of 1987.

These would replace the educational programmes now shown during school term—which are due to be moved to Channel 4—and would fill the gap left during some 30 weeks of the year between the finish of TV-am at 9.25 a.m. and noon.

The plan envisages a mix of imported soap operas, game shows and repeats catering for shift workers who may have missed shows the previous night.

OMBUDSMAN'S DUTIES GROW

Administrative complaints against public bodies, charities and "quangos" (quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations) are now included in areas that may be dealt with by the Government ombudsman, it has been announced.

NO SIGN OF POLICY CHANGE BY THATCHER

By PETER PRYKE Parliamentary Correspondent

MRS THATCHER gave no indication of change in her economic policies during her Question Time in the Commons yesterday, the first since defeat at the Brecon and Radnor by-election.

"We are following the right overall policy," she told a Conservative questioner, who suggested that the prescription of lower taxes put forward by the Chancellor, Mr Lawson, would not be enough to create jobs.

Mrs Thatcher emphasised her preference for lower taxation over increased public spending.

She declared: "I do believe most people believe they are entitled to a large share of their hard-won earnings for their own use."

With Mr Richard Livsey, the Liberal victor at Brecon, waiting in the wings to take his seat, M Ps were anxious to see what effects the reverse might have on the Prime Minister.

Libral taunt

Mr DAVID STEEL, the Liberal Leader, taunted her by recalling her remark that she looked forward to welcoming a Conservative winner from Brecon and also her description during an interview of some Conservative M Ps as "flexi-toys."

He said: "They have been proved right in suggesting you are out of touch with the electorate. How would you describe the electorate of Brecon now they have spoken for Britain?"

Mrs THATCHER, in reply, congratulated Mr Livsey, but added that experience had shown that Liberal and S D P winners of by-elections tended to have only brief tenures.

The calls from the Confederation of British Industry for a two per cent cut in interest rates were raised by Mr PATRICK McNAIR-WILSON (C. New Forest), who suggested that, in fact, the Government still needed to keep a firm hand on inflation.

Agreeing, Mrs THATCHER added that it was not possible to say anything about interest rates from the Despatch Box, other than she did not wish them to be higher for "a moment longer than required."

Raising the question of tax cuts, Mr HUGH DYKES (C. Harow E.) suggested that all the instruments of economic demand management were needed if jobs were to be created, and this included lower interest rates as well as lower taxes, more capital spending and more public housing as well as private.

Mrs THATCHER said that if they wanted more capital spending there had to be less current spending, unless a higher burden of taxation was to be put on the working population.

Mr JOHN TOWNEND (C. Bridlington) asked when the Government would stop giving the impression to the country that public expenditure had been reduced when facts had shown that it had increased.

Mrs THATCHER replied that it was the Chancellor's policy to restrain the total of public expenditure, but within that total to carry out pledges on priorities. These were defence, law and order, the Health Service and the pledges to pensioners.

"We have restrained public expenditure. It is still our policy to get further reduction in direct taxation," she said.

'Phoney' statistics

Replying to Mr ALAN HOWARTH (C. Stratford-on-Avon) Mrs Thatcher said she believed most people would prefer to have more net take-home pay. The only way to achieve that was to reduce taxation from an increase in growth in the economy.

Mr HATTERSLEY, from the Labour Front Bench, asked if the Prime Minister endorsed Mr Lawson's judgment that Britain's was the most successful economy in Western Europe—"or have your civil servants had the opportunity to explain to you the phoney nature of the statistics on which his claim was based?"

Mrs THATCHER said the Chancellor was pointing out that there was no other country in Europe with as good a record of creation of new jobs.

King attacks report on pit sackings

By Our Parliamentary Staff

A SELECT COMMITTEE which called for a national review of the cases of miners dismissed during the pit strike was strongly criticised by Mr KING, Employment Secretary, in the Commons yesterday.

The committee issued a report critical of National Coal Board policy after Mr John Gorst (C., Hendon, N.) had voted with Labour, while the other five Conservatives opposed its conclusions.

The Government has not yet given an official response, but Mr King made clear yesterday that it would not be influenced by the report.

'Grave omission'

It was "absolutely unbelievable" that the Select Committee could report without considering the issue of violence and intimidation, he said.

A number of miners had not been given an opportunity to say whether they wished to strike and had been subjected to the most appalling intimidation.

"For the Select Committee to pay no attention at all to that was a grave omission."

Mr RONALD LEIGHTON (Lab. Newham NE), chairman of the Select Committee, said they had not looked at the merits of the coal strike and had in no way condoned violence.

'Glaring inconsistency'

They had looked at the hard evidence of manifest unfairness and glaring inconsistency in the N C B's treatment of dismissed miners. There should be a review so that every man's case could be heard on the lines of the Acas code.

Mr KING said that reinstatement of miners was a matter entirely for the N C B. The Government fully supported their view that there could be no question of re-employing anyone who had engaged in serious violence against N C B personnel or property.

WHITELAW BOWS TO PROTEST

By Our Parliamentary Staff

Protests over a proposal to take all the stages of the Sporting Events (Control of Alcohol, etc) Bill in a day bore fruit in the Lords yesterday.

Viscount Whitelaw, Leader of the House, presented an alternative motion, which peers approved, to take the Bill's second reading and committee stages tomorrow, as planned, but to defer report stage and third reading until next Wednesday.

Labour MPs 'gagged' over bank debate

By WILLIAM WEEKES Parliamentary Staff

LABOUR M Ps, who want a debate on the collapse of Johnson Matthey bankers and the rescue mounted by the Bank of England, protested in the Commons last night that they were being "gagged."

Mr BRIAN SEDGEMORE (Lab. Hackney S and Shoreditch) produced a file which, he said, contained only a fraction of what be knew about fraud at the firm.

He urged the Speaker, Mr Weatherill, to reconsider his choice of amendments for debate on the report stage of the Finance Bill and to include a new clause signed by 135 Labour M Ps which would have enabled the issue to be aired.

Mr Sedgemore said constituents were telling him that "the establishment is not going to let me get away with it."

He was supported by Mr DENNIS SKINNER (Lab. Bolsover) who said the Government had refused a debate on Johnson Matthey "and it seems we are being gagged on this matter everywhere we go."

'Tory connections'

It was well known that many of the people prominent in Tory circles had some connections with Johnson Matthey and what took place.

"We are concerned that the Governor of the Bank of England, Mr Leigh-Pemberton, was put there specifically by the Prime Minister because, in her words, he was one of us."

Another Labour M P, Mr DALE CAMPBELL-SAVOURS (Workington) said people could not understand why Parliament refused to debate this matter when several hundred million pounds, potentially of public money, were directly involved in saving Johnson Matthey.

Mr WEATHERILL said he had spent much time considering the matter but was not able to change his selection of amendments for debate.

When the report stage started, M Ps on both sides of the House appealed to the Government to exempt employees from liability for income tax on employers' contributions towards workplace nurseries.

Scarce skills

Mr TERRY DAVIS, an Opposition Treasury spokesman, said many employers deemed it in their own interests to provide nurseries, particularly where employees had scarce skills.

Workplace nurseries were especially important for single parents.

Mr TONY BADRY (C, Banbury), who had tabled a similar new clause, said the provision of a car to middle management was in part a prerequisite and should be taxable.

He argued that, whereas a middle manager could usually work without having a company car, the ability of a single mother to work often depended on having someone to care for her children.

Mr JOHN MOORE, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, described the new clause as elitist and inegalitarian. He said it would further discriminate in favour of about 2,000 people who were already advantaged in this area of employment benefits.

The Opposition new clause to stop employees having to pay income tax on benefits derived from the provision of workplace nurseries was defeated by 251 votes to 188, Government majority 63.

CALL TO JAIL HOOLIGANS

By ANTHONY LOOCH

WELL-DRESSED, respectable-looking soccer hooligans have been active for the first time at football matches in Scotland, Mr GERALD MALONE (C.B Aberdeen S) said in the Commons yesterday.

Seeking leave to introduce a private Bill to increase penalties for soccer violence in Scotland, he said the new type of hooligan there could best be described as "a sort of Sunday supplement soccer hooligan."

Such troublemakers dressed in smart clothes like cashmere sweaters, had short haircuts, and were often middle-class.

They also had considerable amounts of money and fines were no deterrent to them. They regarded being found guilty in court as "a badge of honour."

Mr Malone said his Bill sought to impose mandatory custodial sentences on people found guilty of soccer violence.

'Shameful tragedy'

Offenders aged 21 or more would receive a mandatory minimum prison sentence of three months while those aged between 16 and 21 would get at least three months' detention.

The recent shameful tragedy in Belgium involving Liverpool fans had shown that football matches had become the chosen arenas for those with the "20th century gladiatorial instinct."

The Belgian tragedy also revealed that British complacency about football violence had gone on for to long.

Mr Malone said the Bill would underline the Commons' determination as a legislature to fight soccer violence, and would help the police combat the new type of soccer thug in Scotland.

It would also be a step towards bringing families back to the football stadium.

Leave to introduce the Bill was granted, and it was given an unopposed first reading.

LORDS TV MAY CONTINUE AFTER RECESS

Televising the House of Lords may continue after the summer recess, Viscount WHITELAW, Leader of the House, said yesterday.

The six months experiment in Parliament would end this month and the select committeeon televising woudl make a full report before Christmas, he said.

However, he said: "If an interim report was published it would be possible to debate it and reach a deciseion for the temporary continuation of the present arrangements."

PLEA FOR RIGHT OF PRIVACY

By WALTER ABURN Parliamentary Staff

A CALL for a right of privacy to be written into English law to protect citizens from press and media intrusion was made yesterday by Lord DENNING, former Master of the Rolls.

During a third reading debate, in which peers passed the Interception of Communications Bill, he welcomed the protection which it gave against telephone tapping, which he said could be the greatest infringement of privacy.

The Bill followed from a finding by the European Court of Human Rights that Britain was in breach of Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

This states that everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.

Lord Denning said it was known "how the newspapers intrude on the grief of others." There was a need for protection from such intrusions on privacy.

3 BILLS PASSED

The Lords yesterday passed the Insurance (Fees) Bill, the Social Security Bill and the Trustee Savings Bank Bill. Peers also accepted amendments made by the Commons to the Further Education Bill.

Well, it would still be in New York.

But, we venture to suggest it might not be quite the financial power it is today.

Hard to believe? Perhaps.

But the fact remains that a significant part of one of the world's most complex international business communities runs on Tandem computer systems.

Can one computer company make that much difference?

Aren't all large computer systems basically the same anyway?

Well, at Tandem, there is a difference.

A unique on-line system which works like no other computer.

A system which has taken Tandem from scratch to $530 million annual turnover—and put us into FORTUNE magazine's top 500 U.S. companies.

WHERE WOULD FORTUNE 500 BE WITHOUT TANDEM COMPUTERS?

Just ten years after we started, Tandem joined 150 of our customers in FORTUNE magazine's top 500 U.S. companies.

A system we believe will be just as revolutionary for large U.K. organisations as it has been for our clients throughout the rest of the world.

Because it'll actually work with whatever computer system you're currently using to run your business.

And make it better.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE SYSTEM I'VE ALREADY GOT?

Virtually every large company in the world uses a conventional mainframe computer system to run its business.

The mainframe is norm, and has been since the basic technology was established some thirty years ago.

It's part of the furniture—and that's part of the problem. Because companies have grown used to putting up with the problems inherent in mainframe system design.

Like the fact that you can't always have all the information you want, when you want it.

When it's working to capacity, you have to "queue."

And, when you want to expand that capacity, more often than not you have to replace the system with a bigger one.

Which often means stopping, retraining staff, rewriting programs—and writing off your initial investment.

If you need a "fail-safe" computer—one that can continue to function even if there's a breakdown in the system—conventional mainframes can handle it. You just buy two identical systems (at double the cost) and one sits idle waiting for the other to break down.

A neat solution if you happen to make the computers. Not exactly good economics for you.

Like it or lump it, these are the "rules" of conventional computers.

Tandem breaks them all.

SO WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

Some ten years ago, Tandem looked at the problem and found a unique solution.

We did it by developing a system which cures all the day-to-day headaches that come with conventional computer technology.

Our system, for example, has fault-tolerance built into it. If a single component fails, another automatically takes up the workload.

Data integrity is built-in, too. Which means that vital information shouldn't be lost or corrupted in the event of a fault.

If you want to expand the system—or the database—you can, almost indefinitely. Without disrupting the system or the business.

Like building blocks, you simply add another processor when you're ready.

So there's no need to over-invest now in computer power you're not actually going to need until some later date.

And, unlike conventional systems, there's no decline in computer power per £ as your system grows either.

You don't need to be a financial director, or a data processing manager, to imagine what that can mean to computer cost efficiency.

With conventional computers, doubling your processors does not double your performance. With Tandem, each incremental increase in processing power provides matching performance.

With conventional computers, you must continually over-invest to ensure sufficient processing power. With Tandem, growth matches need, so you never invest more than you have to.

What's more, thanks to Tandem's unique distributed database, all system users can have access to the same up to date information simultaneously, anywhere in the world.

However large the organisation is.

(Tandem allows from 2 to 16 processors in a single system, and up to 255 systems in a complete international network, all of which can interface with each other.)

If that sounds complicated to operate, it isn't.

In fact customers in the prestigious U.S. Cowan/Datamation Survey have voted Tandem No.1 for customer loyalty.

Not once. But for three years running.

ON-LINE TRANSACTION PROCESSING. SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.

A Tandem on-line system doesn't just solve the problems of conventional mainframe computers.

(As if that weren't enough).

It actually ushers in a new age where the computer can respond far more effectively to the changing environment in which business must operate to survive.

An age where management is based on information—not intuition.

Where information is fresh, not hours or even weeks old. Where people can access, update and act upon relevant data anywhere in the system network, anywhere in the world.

The age of on-line transaction processing.

The fastest growing sector of an already exploding computer market.

Thanks to our unique approach to system design, Tandem lead the world in on-line transaction processing.

And, as our phenomenal growth in the last ten years shows, it's here to stay.

We set out in 1974 to develop the first fault-tolerant computer system.

Along the way, we created a system that's highly reliable, simple to operate, easy to expand—and versatile enough to handle the communication needs of virtually any corporation.

No matter how big. No matter where.

A system which can go to work improving your business—without destroying your investment in current computer technology.

Fanciful? We don't think so.

And neither do our existing customers in the financial world, telecommunications, manufacturing, distribution, transportation, retailing, energy—and government.

Throughout the world.

Tandem Computers cut the knot for them. Could we do it for you?

Science & Technology Graduates

TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE— FURTHER YOUR EDUCATION AND YOUR PROFESSIONAL CAREER SIMULTANEOUSLY.

The Teaching Company is a collaboration between Austin Rover and the Department of Engineering at Warwick University. It is the largest of its type in the U.K. One measure of its success is its contribution to the technological progress of Austin Rover since its inception. Another is that virtually all of the people who have passed through it in the same period now occupy management graded positions in Austin Rover.

Because of this, a new generation of Teaching Company Associates needs to be selected from applicants who have good honours degrees in Science or Technology and ideally, although not necessarily, have some industrial experience and are aged between 23 and 28.

Those chosen—and there are only ten such places—will be taken onto the payroll of Warwick University for a period of two years at the maximum.

Working partly in the Company and partly at the University and with the full support of the resources and expertise of both organisations, they will be individually responsible, on a project basis, for the application of advanced techniques and technology in the solution of critical manufacturing and engineering problems. Typical development areas are FMS, CAE, Robotics and Vision Systems. At the end of the two year period, the objective is to place successful Associates into career appointments in Austin Rover.

Commencing salaries will be up to £10,500 per annum.

For further particulars and an application form, please contact the Registrar, (Ref.:48/28/85/5), University of Warwick, Coventry CV4 7AL.

We've just broken the £3 billion barrier

New graduates would do well to be with us on the next lap

In the twleve months ending April 1985 our turnover reached £3.2 billion. The highest ever for any UK retailer. And while we're talking in superlatives, you should know that we intend to invest almost £500 million on the largest capital development programme so far...

A dramatic investment in the future. The first flourish can be seen in the decision to open a number of satellite stores. Out of town superstores, shops within shops, new financial services. Even untraditional store decor is on the agenda.

There is a great deal of determination to experiment with new ideas, of encouragement for individuality, of delight in radical business thinking. And, of course, in opportunities for graduates in all disciplines.

If you can see your future in our future, get in touch right away. We have opportunities for training in the following management areas:

COMMERCIAL MANAGEMENT in which you could be responsible for a store with a multi-million pound turnover while still in your twenties.

PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT in which you help to create and apply policy for recruiting, training and developing all categories of store staff.

ADMINISTRATION MANAGEMENT where you develop and refine systems to ensure our continuing efficiency and profitability.

WAREHOUSE MANAGEMENT in which you develop a profound understanding of people and the technology of moving goods from suppliers to warehouses to stores to customers.

The starting salary for all these management training schemes is £7,500 p.a. plus annual bonus.

We'll tell you more about all this if you write, quoting ref. DT, to Management Recruitment, Marks & Spencer, 57 Baker Street, London W1A 1DN.

UK Sales Manager—Packaging

A key role with an ambitious market leader

Circa £18,000 + relocation to East Midlands

Our client, part of a large International Group, is a market leader in the production and marketing of packaging for the fast moving consumer goods market. This is a new appointment as a result of the Company's intention to pursue an ambitious development programme; to both consolidate and significantly increase sales of the complete product range.

Reporting to the UK General Manager, the person appointed will manage and control a small sales team together with having responsibility for direct sales throughout the UK.

The successful applicant must be a proven and consistent sales achiever with specific experience of selling packaging or associated products. Aged 25-45 he or she should possess the drive and personal qualities necessary to make a significant contribution to the growth of the company. Experience of selling to the cosmetics or perfume industries would be an advantage.

In addition to the basic salary quoted, an attractive range of fringe benefits will apply, including relocation assistance, where appropriate, to this rural area of the East Midlands. The international nature of the company dictates that the provision of a company car and/or an associated financial package is subject to negotiation.

Candidates, male or female, should either telephone or write enclosing full career details to Philip Gardiner, Executive Selection Division, Price Waterhouse, Livery House, 169 Edmund Street, Birmingham B3 2JB. (Telephone 021-236 5011). Please quote reference MCS/8571.

MOTORING — JOHN LANGLEY

More than just a Minor success

AS ONE who spends much of his time driving and writing about the latest new models, I have to confess that I also get a lot of fun from running a couple of older cars.

They are both Morris Minors—a 1961 convertible and a 1966 saloon—but we might have been equally happy with some other makes. It just happened that I was so intrigued by Mr Charles Ware's booklet on durable car ownership two years ago that we decided to find out if running an old Minor was really as sensible as it sounded.

The piece I wrote then must have struck a chord because it produced one of the best responses from 20-odd years in this Wednesday slot. Many readers asked me to let them know how we got on with the car. I can only assume that the British still love the Morris Minor—and this, I suspect, is one of the major assets of these rather endearing little cars.

It may seem an intangible asset but it has some practical benefits; even the driving examiner smiled indulgently when my daughter took off in the Minor. She and her brother both passed the test at their first attempt, aided no doubt by some expert professional tuition (take a bow, Mr Peter Rose). In the cut and thrust of modern motoring, such evident good will is not to be despised.

On a more practical level, the Minor proved its worth as an everyday hack for local running, never failing to start (and with the comforting back-up of a starting handle if the battery was low), averaging 35 mpg-plus and with the bonus of cheap insurance (£75 fully comprehensive and including an "agreed value" clause—important if you have an older car in sufficiently good condition to be worth more than the "book" value in a write-off).

Mechanically straightforward and with so much space in the engine bay, it is simple for DIY and cheap for the garage to service.

We had some problems initially with slow punctures from the original cross-ply tyres. Although they still looked good, they had obviously deteriorated (Mr Marcus Jacobson, former chief engineer of the AA has some interesting theories on how tyres can perish after seven years). Certainly the biggest improvement we made was fitting a set of Pirelli steel radials, which not only cured the reliability problems but transformed the ride comfort and handling.

The clutch, which had been showing signs of wear when we bought the car, was replaced as a precaution when the children took the test. The only unexpected fault was when the water pump expired without warning, and a puzzled daughter arrived home in clouds of steam, announcing that the car appeared to be on fire. . . .

After almost two years' faithful service, the original saloon was part-exchanged for the convertible, which cost almost as much as a new Mini—such is the price of open air motoring. It, and another saloon bought privately as a back-up car have been equally reliable.

Although they have little appeal to the business or high-mileage motorist, our experience suggests that such cars can indeed make good economic sense as a back-up vehicle for family use. The main cost of motoring, depreciation, is virtually eliminated, and provided the car is structurally sound, it can be very cheap to run especially if the owner is prepared to do some of the servicing himself.

The main drawbacks compared with a modern car — lack of refinement, comfort and sheer performance — are not too serious in this type of use. But for the growing number of enthusiasts who want to progressively update their cars, the Morris Minor Centre in Bath is now marketing a range of performance and comfort kits, mainly using parts from the later Morris Marina or Austin Metro.

I have been trying a fully restored Traveller estate with adjustable Metro seats, Marina servo-assisted disc brakes and front and rear suspension modifications giving vastly improved ride comfort, and better handling. It also had a tuned 1098 cc engine, developing 60-plus bhp, enabling it to accelerate lustily and cruise easily, if somewhat noisily at a steady 70 mph.

On its lowered suspension, this "wolf-in-Granny's clothing" felt rock-steady at speed and accelerated smartly away without a trace of the usual axle tramp. Many owners, I suspect would settle just for the suspension and brake improvements, as well as the shapelier seats, but there are also plans to offer the later 1·3 litre engine, in performance or high economy versions, as well as with automatic transmission. Mr Ware believes the automatic will appeal strongly to private owners, especially those who are retiring and want easier driving in a durable and economical car.

After all these years, I had forgotten what a practical little estate car the Traveller is.

Its timber framing (which forms part of the structure and is not just applied decoration as on the later Mini Traveller) gives it a distinctive yet "classless" appearance, rather like the Land Rover, with excellent visibility through the long, sliding rear side windows. Its "as new" finish was widely admired, while its road performance obviously surprised and intrigued other drivers.

Recommended reading for anyone interested in this type of motoring includes "Morris Minor—the world's supreme small car," by Paul Skilleter; (Osprey); "Practical Classics on Morris Minor Restoration" (Brooklands Books); and ETAO (Brooklands Books); and "Durable Car Ownership" by Charles Ware (Morris Minor Centre, Lower Bristol Road, Bath).

Nissan Micra on long test

IT'S HARD to please some people. A motorist I know was complaining about his year-old Nissan Micra. Yes, he agreed, it was more reliable than any previous car he'd had (though he had run the battery flat after accidentally leaving the boot light on), but he was "only" getting 53 miles a gallon!

He admitted that he sometimes forgot to change up into fifth gear — his previous car had only four gears — but he still thought he should be getting a better fuel consumption. After all, the "official" figures quoted by the manufacturers referred to something like 58 miles a gallon. . . .

I pointed out that this was at a constant 56 mph. "Well," he said, "I drive at 50 mph most of the time." I suppose it's the car manufacturers' own fault for concentrating so much attention in their advertising on the 56 mph test results, instead of on the more realistic urban driving and 75 mph figures. As it happens, the latest version of the Micra, just announced, is ultra-economical at these speeds, too, with 44·8 mpg on the town cycle and 42·8 mpg at 75 mph, but I don't know if that would satisfy my friend.

I know more about the Micra than most test cars because I have had one on an extended test (we don't just drive Morris Minors). But no alarming secrets have been revealed in this (relatively) long term run. It has been monotonously reliable, and after 13,000 miles the only signs of wear are an impending coming-apart at one of the cloth-seat seams and slight chipping of the black paint edging on the driver's door—the main silver paintwork remains unblemished.

It is very light (hence its excellent fuel economy) and feels it, with only the driver aboard. It is also very lively for a little engine of 988cc, and the 55 bhp at 6,000 rpm makes it feel like a small sports saloon when the gearbox is used to the full. But with a full load it is necessary to change down early from fifth gear on long inclines. Revised gear ratios on the latest model should have improved this aspect of the performance, as well as giving a higher claimed top speed of 90 mph.

Detailed changes have been made to the interiors and exterior of the new range, with additional equipment. Prices are unchanged, starting at £3,975 for the basic model, but there is a new SGL version, with additional trim and equipment, including a stereo radio and cassette player, at £4,999.

RENAULT has also brought some new models onto the British market, including the interesting Matra-designed Espace. Described as a "one-box" leisure car, it can seat up to seven, with versatile interior accommodation making it very useful for family or business use. When I tried it in France last year, I was impressed by its blend of space and performance in a vehicle only 14ft long. Its two-litre engine with five-speed gearbox give a claimed maximum of 109 m.p.h., with good acceleration. Prices in Britain start at £9,990.

Five-door versions of the new Renault 5 have also arrived, at prices ranging from £4,650 to £5,945.

THEATRE / The Three Musketeers

A panto out of season

THE pleasant playhouse at Greenwich has been taken over for a season by a raucous company of barnstormers who call themselves the New Vic Theatre. They are presenting "The Three Musketeers" as an outrageous burlesque in what looks like an attempt to provide summer vacationers with the equivalent of a Christmas pantomime.

For my money the venture falls between two stools. More music and song were needed for a proper show, or less horseplay and slapstick if Dumas's marvellous story was to work. What we get might be called holiday camp.

A pity, because Phil Woods's adaptation keeps decently close to the novel, right up to the killing of D'Artagnan's mistress by the dastardly Milady. Here, in garbled form, the young adventurer duly saves the honour of Louis XIII's Queen, after Richelieu has had her diamonds stolen, and subsequently fights at La Rochelle before arriving so famously and fatally late at the Carmelite convent of Béthune.

But the cast, who in months of playing have no doubt broadened their effects, put the kibosh on Dumas with a rave-up of puns and knockabout farce. When D'Artagnan says he is a Gascon, he is told he smells more like a gasworks. Foreseeably, Aramis has to observe that that is not Milady but his wife. Only a stray line here and there indicates that the characters of the Three may once have been decently established.

Still, Ian Gill's well-dressed production has its moments. The war with England is waged between actors armed with a catapult and audience issued with ammunition, accompanied by lots of smoke and explosions. The children loved that. The duels are well staged (by Peter Woodward) and include a battle royal between two women. And I did laugh when the inukeeper said: "You will be sleeping on the first floor. There is a bed if you prefer."

Possibly Robin Davies's cheeky Welsh D'Artagnan, Valerie Braddell's sinister Milady and David Henry's huge Porthos emerge with most credit from a show which has got more than somewhat out of hand.

Moira Brooker and Robin Davies in "The Three Musketeers" at the Greenwich Theatre.

TELEVISION / Over exposed

THE MOST surprising thing about Glamour Night (B B C-2), last night's contribution to the "Summer Season" of B B C plays, was its date of manufacture: 1985. Not, evidently, one of those two-year-old productions which controllers have, rather desperately, been shovelling on to the screen recently.

"Glamour Night," by John Minson, was a kind of sub-feminist piece. Well, more sub than feminist, really. It was about these four chaps in the local camera club getting their secondary sexual kicks from photographing an amateur model, who might—or might not—be prepared to go the whole way.

All of them were clearly marked "Stereotoype: This Way Up." Bob, the macho member of the group, confident of his Way With The Birds, was going to get June, the agreeably buxom model, to remove her top (actually he did it rather skilfully). Malcolm was the amost unbelievably gauche Young Married, quivering with excitement at the prospect of viewing alternative female flesh. George (Rodney Bewes, looking depressingly middle-aged and short haircut) was Mr Nice, wanting his part of the action but concerned, as chairman, that it should all be conducted in the best possible taste.

Finally, there was Glyn, the abrasive odd-man-out, who addressed us via camera on the subjects of chauvinism, male immaturity, treating women as sex objects and chattels, sexual fantasies and the like. Only to reveal himself, at the end, as the most rabid closet chauvinist of all. Surprise, surprise, unless you happen to have seen the same sort of denouement umpteen times before

Feminism, I would hazard, does not cut much ice in Glasgow. The stock response from the Glasgow male who considers himself to have been slighted by his female partner appears to be a blow in the face. Received in the same spirit as offered, without resentment or recrimination.

This phenomenon was observable twice in last night's second episode of Taggart (I TV), a three-part detective thriller from Scottish TV which makers of less than gripping one-off dramas could do well to study for lessons in craftsmanship and construction.

Spare, taut, credible and excellently plotted, "Taggart" is every bit as good as my memory of the original "Killer," which first introduced us to the less-than-lovable but very convincing detective chief inspector, Jim Taggart (Mark McManus).

Faithful to Hardy

A PLAY can't be faithful to the novel that inspires it. There isn't time. Besides, there is the question of the author's voice. This is what I miss most in Michael Fry's skilled compression of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" at the Latchmere Theatre, Notting Hill.

Hardy speaks in the device of a masked chorus, Greek style, but not enough to keep us in his palm as in the book; and the irony almost vanishes. Yet the tragic feeling and power of the tale exercise their spell in theatrical terms because Hardy's heroine, a born loser, is so winningly sympathetic a victim of Victorian country values.

The role is a gift to the actress, as Wendy Hiller unforgettably proved in Ronald Gow's version some years ago. She had the advantage of the perfect Tess voice and of an adaptor whose approach allowed her to build her performance on long scenes.

Mr Fry, in the modern, staccato manner, flicks through the novel with more literal loyalty—you might say chronic addiction to its chronology — and punctuates the episodes with Anthony Feldman's musical settings of poems by Hardy himself and William Barnes, so that dances and songs form a kind of commentary and smooth out the fragmented structure.

It is a pity though that the Floorboards Company, which goes in for boards and boxes as scenery, has only seven players for umpteen characters because it means that crucial figures like Alec and Angel come on periodically in minor roles, as if to add a ghostly dimension.

Tess herself, however, is herself throughout. Anjeli Belli's dark beauty conveys the innocence, pain and haunted guilt of the earlier passages with throbbing sensitivity; and her ultimate, murderous indignation comes from a visibly maturer woman of unyielding fidelity to her love for the husband who abandoned her so priggishly.

In her fury she rants a little. This is forgivable in a most touching performance. Less excusable is the occasional inaudibility, in such a small auditorium, of Jonathon Morris's otherwise excellent Angel. Ian Reddington's oily Alec makes you want to call the police every time he appears; and if the rest of the company is sometimes dire in its attempts at populating Wessex with Mummerset accents, Mr Fry's production brings us to Stonehenge with a more than melodramatic assurance.

DANCE / 'Onegin,' Festival Ballet

THE CENTRAL role of Tatiana in "Onegin," the ballet staged for the Stuttgart Ballet in 1965-67, offers exceptional opportunities to the ballerina—partly because Tatiana was created by the supreme Russian poet Pushkin, and partly because John Cranko's choreography is so to speak neutral, permitting the ballerina to pour emotion and characterisation into it without any unsuitable quirks and mannerisms.

Natalia Makarova, dancing Tatiana in the Festival Ballet's production at the Coliseum on Monday night, took full advantage of the opportunities presented to her. Strongly and skilfully supported by Alexander Sombart (as Onegin), she moved over the stage with feathery and delightful lightness. At first this lightness, together with her elegant, delightful and expressive line, was used by her to suggest the innocence and impulsiveness of the shy girl living in the country, falling overwhelmingly in love with a Byronic visitor.

In Act II, she used her lightness and elegance very differently. By now 10 years had passed, and Tatiana, transformed into a great lady, seems very happy in her marriage with Prince Gremin. But Makarova showed clearly that her own feelings for Onegin still survived when he unexpectedly appeared at a ball, and there was a marvellous development of changing moods in the final scene.

Cranko gave Onegin relatively little dancing to do, relying mainly on mime for this role, and Sombart gave a splendidly convincing performance as the gloomy, ultra-romantic hero.

The petite artist Luca Truglia danced with artless abandon as Tatiana's sister Olga, while Peter Schaufuss, as Lenski, stood out as a superb dancer.

MUSIC / City Festival

HISTORIC interest cuts both ways. This year's City of London Festival—the 15th since 1962—preceded its exploration of hallowed churches and civic halls with a concert at the most recent addition to that square mile's cultural venues, the Barbican. And how lucky that England's capital numbers among the distinguished few that can boast an eponymous masterpiece. Vaughan Williams "London Symphony" provided an evocative conclusion to the programme performed by the London Symphony Orchestra under Gennadi Rozhdestvensky.

The Russian conductor not only knew how to let the vast dimensions of the work arise with deceptive ease. Aided perhaps by memories of his spell with the B B C Symphony Orchestra, he inspired his players to respond subtley to such impressionist tone paintings as the epilogue's ripples of the Thames or in the first movement, the Hampstead-Heath-on-Bank-holiday mood to quote Michael Kennedy's sleeve note for Boult's recording, now reissued by E M I. If some of the quotations such as the slow movement's lavender seller's cry or the hansome-cab's jingles have become historic, any tourists in the audience must have spotted the solo harp's Westminsters Chimes.

In Brahms's Violin Concerto the distinguished American Oscar Shumsky, recently returned to the concert platform, gave a reading of considerable form. Yet he could not hide the fact that the more firmly established and interpretation has become, the more difficult is it to create an impression of spontaneity.

This was preceded by Shostakovich's Festival Overture of 1954 when he clearly found it difficult to conceal a feeling of liberation at the death of Stalin.

The concert had started with Walton's "Ceremonial Fanfare," done fullest justice to by the playing as well as by the pomp and circumstance of 10 smartly attired trumpeters from the Royal Military School of Music.

Sombart recital

MAKING her London debut at Wigmore Hall on Monday evening, the French pianist, Elizabeth Sombart, opened and closed with the music of Chopin but gave as the centrepiece of her recital a rare performance of Medtner's "Sonata reminiscence" in A minor.

Miss Sombart is not the interpreter to impose a dynamic design from outside a piece and, even if the turbulent climaxes of Chopin's Ballade in F minor or the Third Piano Sonata, we felt that she was attempting to let the music unfold at its own pace.

At the same time, it must be said that her attitude to the music sometimes bordered on the passive and a certain languor sometimes settled on her playing when a section should have been breathing easily and naturally: the barcarolle rocked a little sleepily, for instance, and the main subject of the ballade took too long to become energised.

The Medtner could certainly have done with a more positive and variegated projection, for it is music which perhaps lacks the contrasts usually associated with sonata thinking and the long, impromptu-like unfolding of its ideas needed much strongly-etched light and shade for all its incidental beauties.

THE NEW MIDI HAS SHOWN COMPETITORS THE VALUE OF BEDFORD'S SPECIALISATION.

Often with the launch of a brand-new commercial vehicle buyers initially stay away in droves.

They're hesitant to take on the new against the well-tried.

Not so with Bedford's new Midi 1-tonner. Because not only is the Midi already out-selling the German and Japanese equivalents, but as a new entry is also challenging long-established British makes.

The Luton-built Midi has been as enthusiastically received by motoring journalists as by buyers.

One writer, who drove four Midi vans out of the 16 model range, accurately predicted in the April issue of 'Marketeer,' "A favourite is just what this new van, the Bedford Midi, will become...It is, absolutely, a little cracker. It is a joy to drive..." The authoritative 'Transport News' concurred that the Midi was "...sturdy, stylish and well-designed..."

As registrations of Midis ably demonstrate, Bedford's position as Britain's biggest commercial vehicle specialists means vehicles better specified to the real needs of operators and buyers alike.

While on top of the Midi's launch success has come increased demand for the Bedford TL truck range.

A recent review of 7½-tonners in 'Transport Engineer' summed up our own intentions with, "The widest choice that is in tune with operational needs is Bedford's."

Bedford as part of General Motors Truck & Bus Group, the world's largest specialists, have vast resources to draw upon. Planned are even more upsets for our competitors.

And better vehicles for users.

WAY OF THE WORLD

Tight Screening

BECAUSE of the unexpectedly slow voting process the Rhodesian Government had to extend the general election by a further two days. Owing to what is called "tight screening of voters" it was estimated that after the two days originally allowed only about a third of the three million entitled to vote had actually done so.

So angry is Mr Mugabe at the result of the election, which leaves him still short of the majority he needs to change the constitution in 1990 by the terms of the Lancaster House agreement, that he has threatened to set up a one-party state regardless of legality or the consent of the minority parties.

He believes no referendum is required. This seems hard on his subjects. There are probably no people in the world—except, of course, in countries like Albania, where nearly everybody votes — who are so keen on voting as the black people of Rhodesia.

They acquired a taste for the delights of voting in 1979 and even more in the election of 1980, when the screening of voters was so amazingly tight that even Lord Soames, then installed as Governor of "Southern Rhodesia," had to make the most heroic efforts to ignore it so that the election could go on.

One of the problems in the recent election may have been that many voters were trying to vote for Lord Soames or even for Lord Carrington, who between them did so much to bring the present government to power.

But this delight in voting for its own sake may be older than we think. During the election of 1980 I remember hearing people maintain that the mysterious mazelike ruins of Zimbabwe, said to be the only stone buildings ever built by black people in Africa, were really polling booths.

At Atomdene

SO disgusted is Paul Ohm, the well-known Edgbaston freelance technologist, with the lukewarm reception of President Reagan's "Star Wars" programme in this country that he has set up an independent research project of his own on the same lines.

He has marked off a section of his all-technological garden at "Atomdene" with a special laser-operated barrier to keep out the public, particularly a group of local professional ramblers who claim there is a right of way through a corner of it.

Some of them who have tried to assert this complain of "side-effects" such as the growth of third ears and "tingling and numbness" of the extremities. But Ohm tells them crisply that they should be glad to have added to the sum of scientific knowledge even unwittingly.

Yesterday Ohm, who earlier successfully rotated his hat with a laser-operated turntable, suffered a setback. The carbon lining of the inner "suitcase" housing his multi-stage experimental rocket caught fire when he struck a special accelerated "match" of his own invention so that he could examine the delicate mechanism of the interlocking nuclear gasket assembly.

Several stages of the rocket immediately achieved "lift-off" but in the wrong order. One of the smaller ones, which was "wobbling" in an eccentric trajectory, only just missed hitting Cheryl Toast, 25, the glamorous blonde Nerdley-born air hostess who took part in Ohm's ill-fated attempt to fly his own Concorde at Stretchford Airport some years ago.

"Look out!" Cheryl squealed. "That nearly singed my glamorous blonde hair." "Perhaps that will teach you not to hang about while I'm doing my research." Ohm snapped, well aware that a group of people watching from a safe distance included a Press photographer and a reporter.

A headline in huge purple letters, "Oddball Scientist in Laser Love Nest Drama" hung in the air for 38·57 seconds and could be clearly read by all — evidently a "spin-off" from Ohm's experiments which, though it interested him as a scientist, exasperated him as a man.

Vandal Days

VANDALS are reported to have destroyed the remains of a bronze age settlement being excavated by archaeologists near Reading in Berkshire. They also smashed digging equipment on loan to the archaeologists, causing several thousand pounds worth of damage. The dig is on the site of new gravel workings.

Is this a new departure in vandalism? Archaeologists, as they rapidly increase in numbers, are becoming more and more unpopular, taking some of the strain off other unpopular professions such as architecture and art history.

Or were the vandals the ghosts of bronze age people, just as angry at having their settlement dug up by archaeologists as by gravel excavators?

A Bad Business

"INVITED by vote of the Durham miners to attend their annual gala, Neil Kinnock shares a platform with Arthur Scargill and the local bishop, David Jenkins" (from a list of forthcoming events in the SUNDAY TIMES).

Local bishop! David Jenkins! There was a time when the Bishop of Durham, the only Prince-Bishop in England, one of the great landowners of the North and guardian of the Marches against marauding Scots, would have put the fear of God into anyone who presumed so to describe him.

There was a time when even the Durham miners, who provided some part at least of the Bishop's princely revenues, would have trembled with fear at such presumption. It is true that the miners once tried to duck a Bishop of Durham in the River Wear. But he, whether or not that was the reason for their wrath, was a progressive bishop and so deserved it.

Words fail me. But I shall be surprised if the FEUDAL TIMES AND REACTIONARY HERALD does not soon carry a thoughtful leader on this sad decline.

Rare glimpse of blooms at Westminster

By FRED WHITSEY

MORE than 100 different kinds of lily in flower and over 50 hostas showing their distinctive foliage offer a rare opportunity for studying these plants at this week's Westminster Flower Show, organised by the Royal Horticultural Society.

They have won the only gold medal of the day for the society's lily group and the Hosta and Hemerocallis Society, which have collaborated in mounting the display.

The show in the New Horticultural Hall, which remains open to the public until 5 pm today, is also especially notable for the exhibits of hardy perennial flowers.

The Delphinium Society's competition, in which the best spike has been judged an example of the lavender Emily Hawkins, from S. James, Harefield, Middlesex, is supported by a superb show of lofty spikes staged by the firm of Woodfield.

New plants

New plants include the dwarf golden-leaved Spiraea Golden Princess from Starborough; Pink Whirls osteospermum from Hopleys; a pink from Ramparts named Henry of Essex with deep cerise-fringed flowers, the shrubby Escallonia Red Elf from E.L.F. Plants with garnet coloured flowers, ivy-leaved geraniums Suncoup, rosy magenta, from Fibrex, and Green Eyes lavender, from Vernon.

County Park has a series of rare pratias, ground-hugging plants from New Zealand.

Dr Miriam Rothschild's patch of turf from her wildflower garden as Ashton Wold contains 47 species, 37 in bloom. Many rare perennials appear in the display mounted by the Hardy Plant Society, among them orchids that can be grown out of doors.

Computer chief returns home

By JOHN IZBICKI
Education Correspondent

ONE of the world's leading computer scientists, who has developed machines that can talk and answer their human controllers, has decided to reverse the "brain drain" and return to Britain.

Dr David Warren, 38, who is claimed to be the first compiler for the logical programming language Prolog, decided in 1981 to work for the Artificial Intelligence Center at the Stanford Research Institute in California.

Now the vice-president of an American-based computer firm developing and marketing the Prolog system, which allows computers to translate languages and talk in a manner similar to "HAL" in the film "2001: A Space Odyssey", has accepted a Chair at Manchester University.

He is to become its first professor of computer logic.

LSE POST FILLED

BRONZE AGE BUILDING DAMAGED

Careless visitors have badly damaged part of a 3,000-year-old building unearthed on a Bronze Age site at Flag Fen near Peterborough, Cambridgeshire.

The building, which had been preserved in a peat bog, must be kept wet and covered in plastic sheeting to prevent deterioration, but uninvited sightseers left part of it uncovered.

Mr Francis Prior, project manager on the site, said four wall posts had dried out and disintegrated. The site had been kept secret since its discovery three years ago, but archaeologists announced the find last week.

RELIGIOUS RUIN FIND

Ecclesiastical ruins dating back 900 years have been found beneath tennis courts at Lewes, Sussex, where excavation will start later this month. An Iron Age burial ground has also been found in the area.

LONDON ROAD CHANGES 'HAVE CAUSED JAMS'

By Our Business Correspondent

New road schemes in London have created more traffic jams than they have eased, according to a Greater London Council report published yesterday, which is being studied by the council's transport committee today.

The report, based on traffic studies on the A40 (M) Westway, M11, Blackwall Tunnel, North Circular Road, and M25, is aimed at countering Department of Transport arguments for new schemes.

Mr Paul Moore, vice-chairman of the GLC transport committee, said: "The only way to cut congestion is cheaper and better public transport, an end to company cars, and tough parking controls."

Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg

GRAND Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg, who ruled the tiny nation from 1919 until her abdication in 1964, died yesterday aged 89, at Fischbach Castle, her home for more than 20 years.

She was born on Jan. 23 1896 at Berg, and ascended the throne in January 1919, 10 months before she married Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma, who died in 1970. They had six children.

Grand Duchess Charlotte abdicated in November 1964 in favour of her eldest son Jean, present Grand Duke of the nation of 366,000 people.

She said she was entitled to enjoy her retirement like any other worker.

Pro-German sister

She took the throne a year after the end of the 1914-18 War, unsure whether she could preserve her title and the independence of her country, which had always been easy prey for its bigger neighbours.

She succeeded her elder sister Marie Adelaide, who was forced to abdicate because of her pro-German feelings during the war. That split public feeling about the merits of royalty, with many preferring a Republic.

However, Charlotte's popularity grew, and in a referendum eight months later, she won 80 per cent. of the votes.

Her intelligence, charm and dedication to her tasks turned her into a symbol for a country widely admired for its prosperity, high standard of living and benevolent social legislation.

During the Nazi invasion of her country, Charlotte and her family fled, first to France and then to London, where she led the government in exile.

Returning in 1945, she was met with a spontaneous and emotional greeting from Prime Minister Jean Dupong. "Madame, we love you," he said.

JAN DE QUAY

Jan de Quay, who has died aged 83, was a former Dutch Prime Minister who led the government from 1959 to 1963. He played a controversial role during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands.

A psychologist, he was one of the founders of the Dutch Union in 1940. After the Nazi invasion that year, the union became a political force which aimed to reach agreement with the German occupiers that would prevent the feared imposition of an occupation government dominated by the Dutch Nazi party.

When the union was banned a year later, he was held hostage by the Germans. After the war a committee ruled that his actions had been justified, and he was able to resume his political career.

£68m FACELIFT FOR HEATHROW TERMINAL 3

By Our Air Correspondent

Heathrow Terminal 3 is to undergo a phased four-year redevelopment programme costing £68 million to improve comfort and service for passengers on intercontinental flights.

Work is due to begin early next year after British Airways' longhaul services are transferred from Terminal 3 to Heathrow's new £200 million Terminal 4.

This move will result in a temporary reduction by about one-third in the annual total of 11 million passengers passing through Terminal 3.

THE GREAT REVIVAL: THOSE SPOTS ARE BACK BEFORE OUR EYES

WE'RE GOING POLKA DOTTY

in the nicest way, of course

IT was in 1883 that one W. B. Squire noted in the "Grove Dictionary of Music" that London, Paris and Vienna were "successively attacked by this furious polkamania," with streets, hats and clothes being named after the dance.

I know now exactly how he must have felt.

For today, just over a century later, polkamania appears to have struck again.

Reference books seem to equate the initial popularity of the polka dot with the original Bohemian peasant dance, the polka, introduced into fashionable salons in Berlin and St Petersburg in the 1830s.

It subsequently spawned a rash of new words, new modes of dress and behaviour and new types of food in much the same way Beatlemania swept the world in the 1960s.

The polka dot itself long outlived the dance and was well entrenched as part of fashion when the cancan caused the next sensation.

In 1894, the writer Elizabeth L. Banks noted in her "Campaigns of Curiosity: Journalistic Adventures of an American Girl in London," that she had bought a polka-dot blouse and apron "for work in the laundry."

Numerous novels around the turn of the century made mention of women in polka-dot dresses, men in polka-dot ties and people wiping their fevered brows with polka-dot bandanas or handkerchiefs.

This season, the polka-dot craze is from head to toe. Everywhere I go I see spots before my eyes.

Quaintly defined as a pattern of dots, uniform in size and arrangement, the polka dot is popping up on everything.

Canvas sneakers twinkle with aspirin-sized dots, while picture hats turn up to reveal bold, 10 coin-sized spots on the brim.

There are bold black and white spots for summer cotton separates, sophisticated spots in silk for late-day dresses and dramatic gold lamé spots for dinner and dancing.

It must be catching; even scarves, gloves, lingerie, hair ribbons, stockings, ties and socks have spots on. It is enough, really, to make you go dotty.

PENNING HER WAY TO SUCCESS

MOST people accept the economy and anonymity of a ballpoint or fibre-tip but for personal letters the fountain pen is enjoying a comeback.

This is timely for Francine Gomez, president of the Waterman Pen Company, though the upsurge in the company's fortunes since she took over 15 years ago has been largely due to her efforts.

She is celebrating with a travelling exhibition of beautiful old Waterman pens and early posters and publicity material, entitled 100 Years of Waterman Pens, which will be in Edinburgh next month going on to Oxford.

Added to this, she is also celebrating the publication of her biography and trying her hand in the political arena.

"Commonsense and energy," she said was what she applied in making a success of Waterman's. Originally it was an American company and her grandfather bought the rights for France, his widow running the firm after his death, and then her daughter, who was Francine's mother.

Francine Gomez, president of the Waterman Pen Company. High-flying women, she warns, can ever have the best of both worlds: private and business.

Francine's own entry into the company as the third-generation woman president, at the age of 35, was at her mother's request. "She called me in to help because I had a head for business," said Francine, who has since acquired a reputation for plain speaking and a ruthlessness, which sprang from the drastic staff pruning she did immediately on joining the firm.

The pruning included several cousins and other members of her family, some of whom have not spoken to her since. "It was unfortunate but necessary if anyone was going to retain their jobs," she said.

Sales doubled in five years: by 1975 profits were increasing by up to 50 per cent. a year and Waterman now has 65 per cent. of the pen market in France.

It was all, she said, "quite easy once I had carte blanche to get rid of excess staff and antiquated equipment." It also involved hard work and disruption of her immediate family life.

"At first I didn't have time to think about myself: things were so bad I just had to get on and take the necessary measures even if it meant working day and night."

Her two daughters from her first marriage were already old enough to accept this, but her second marriage was a casualty.

Her ex-husband, now president of a big electronics group, at first was her business mentor, but eventually, she said, he was unable to cope with the competition and also disliked her growing involvement in politics. So they divorced.

By AVRIL GROOM

She has recently remarried—to a younger man, who, she said, is more sympathetic to high-powered career women.

That is just as well, for success has not softened Francine's approach to work.

In this month's INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT magazine, she passes on her advice and philosophy to other high-flying women, warning them that in her opinion, they can never have the best of both worlds: private and business. Eventually they must choose between the two, she says. Her rules for the ambitious woman who wants to succeed in her career are:

1 She sacrifices her private life for her professional life, and postpones *until tomorrow the happiness of having children.

2 She dampens down her emotions.

3 She must be able to handle the overload of work at home and at the office.

4 She should look upon colleagues not as women or men but as members of the human race with certain specifications.

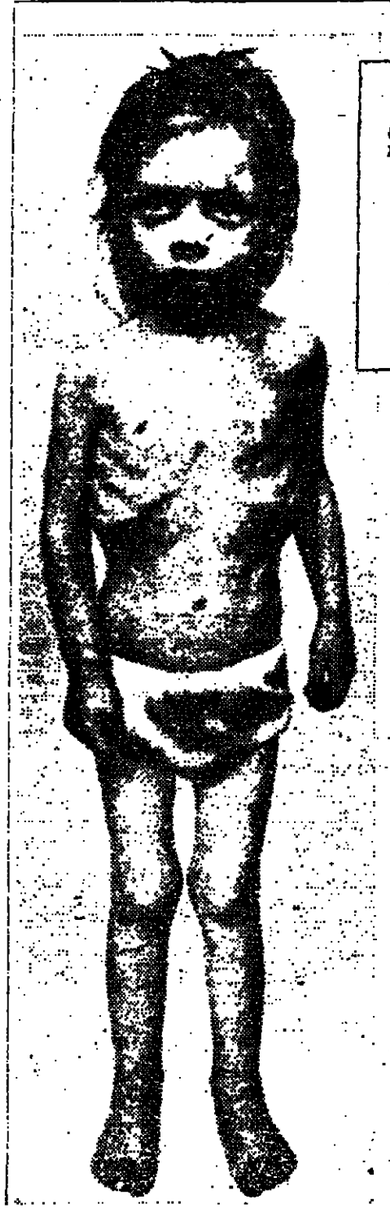
In the meantime, Francine plans to stand in 1986 for election to the National Assembly as a member of Giscard d'Estaing's conservatives. "I have things to say which I believe can help my country. I want to be elected."

Cramming politics and Waterman into her life, she travels by company plane, combining business meetings with political rallies.

After 15 years, she reckons she knows enough about running the company to leave the day-to-day issues in the hands of her managing director.

"I stick to the creative side, which I love," she said.

The level she is aiming at in this country, where Waterman pens were reintroduced some 18 months ago, is strictly up-gift section of the trade market: the £50 to £80 having a resurgence. And after that? She sees Britain as an early notch on her yardstick for world where fountain pens are expansion.



Four years old.
Seriously underweight for her age.
Scavenging for food where she can find it.
And she's English.

With a stepfather who refused to acknowledge her existence and a mother too frightened to help her, this child was being slowly and deliberately starved.

She'd reached the point where she was feeding herself out of dustbins.

It didn't happen in the famine stricken third world, it happened in an English town, (like the one you live in).

The NSPCC doesn't set out to punish the parents or break up the home.

The child has to be protected while we provide help for both her and her parents.

£15.48 can protect a child for two weeks. And that's the sum we're asking for now.

If you can't afford quite that much, all donations are gratefully received.

And they all go to help over 40,000 of your fellow countrymen.

I want to help protect a child and enclose my cheque or postal order for (please indicate up, opposite box)

A PSEUDO-CRISIS

A VIEW WHICH IS fashionably held among members of the political classes is that to stand any chance of winning the next election the Government must make a choice between two opposite policy poles: it must either re-affirm its commitment to something called "radical Thatcherism" or it must perform a contortion which is known as a "U-turn." Accordingly, tomorrow's Cabinet meeting to discuss the public spending target for 1986-87 has been accorded special significance. We are told that the Government is in a state of shock after the Brecon and Radnor by-election, that the "consolidators" in the Cabinet now outnumber the "radicals" and that even the Chancellor with those weekend references to the "middle way" has signalled his defeat. The cause of this alarm and despondency, it is suggested, is that the Government has all of a sudden realised that the difficulties of reining back public expenditure growth are intractable, that the expenditure growth are intractable, that the electorate is not prepared to tolerate further cuts in servics, whether real or imagined, and that the strategy of delivering taxe reductions in the two years before the next election is no longer consistent with the goal of lowering inflation.

In the real world, as opposed to the fevered imaginings of political commentators and M Ps who fear for their seats, things are rarely so simple or dramatic. In the first place it is nonsense to talk as if the Government has pursued a red in tooth and claw monetarism for six years and is only now having second thoughts. It is nothing new for Mrs Thatcher's Government either to experience disappointment on the public expenditure front or to place a higher priority on achieving a satisfactory rate of growth than bearing down on inflation.

Nor can it plausibly argued that the economy has suffered some terrible setback which now threatens the Government with the prospect of having to face the electorate in two years time with a new recession closing in. The fact is that given the amount of economic capacity which was lost for good in 1980, Britain's real growth rate of around 2¾ per cent. a year for each of the past four years is about the best which could be hoped for. Even more to the point is the unusually well-balanced pattern of growth with consumption, investment and exports all playing a significant role. Unemployment has remained an appalling blight, but even there signs of amelioration, admittedly faint, are perceptible.

Why is it then that the Government is thought to be in so much trouble? There are two reasons and they are both largely of the Government's own making. The first is that the Government is a victim of its own hyperbole. By continually boasting of its dogged determination to restrain public expenditure growth it has looked foolish when it has failed to do so. It is not that the Government should have tried to claim the credit for its inability to check public spending, as some people have faciley suggested, but that it should have been more open about the difficulties and explained its reasons, often rather respectable ones, for ducking out of painful decisions.

The second reason is that althongh the Government's view about the way the world works has undergone much revision since 1979, it has attempted to preserve the fiction that its course has been unwavering. The most recent example is the way in which it has set about altering the mix between monetary and fiscal policy. Until the end of last year the Government's priority was to sustain the economic recovery by means of keeping interest rates low and meeting strong private sector credit demand. The symbol of the Government's anti-inflation resolve was the importance attached to holding down the public sector borrowing requirement.

When this approach led directly to the New Year sterling crisis, the emphasis was discretely switched—interest rates were allowed to rise and the Chancellor hinted in the Budget that there was "nothing sacrosanct about the precise mix of monetary and fiscal policies required to meet the objectives of the Medium-Term Financial Strategy." This undoubtedly means that if interest rates stay near their present levels, the Chancellor will not be too upset if the PSBR in 1986-87 exceeds the present forecast. This is entirely sensible in macroeconomic terms and, conveniently, leaves the way open for the promised tax cuts.

It is hard to understand why neither Mr LAWSON nor Mrs THATCHER can bring themselves both to explain and defend what they are undoubtedly doing. As long as the Government sticks to its intention to reduce taxes and as long as reasonable pressure is maintained on spending departments not to exceed their budgets, it will not be the end of the world if a few arbitrarily chosen targets are missed. If the Government would only ston being silly, its critics would have far less to chatter about and the atmosphere of pseudo-crisis would quickly pass.

FIGHTING BACK

PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN'S hyperbole, not to mention his rhetoric, can perhaps be forgiven granted that he and his countrymen were badly shaken by the TWA hijacking (and the murder of a U.S. Navy diver) and were embarrassed by their inability to do something about it at the time. The President is now insisting that the United States is not going to tolerate intimidation, terrorism, and what he calls outright acts of war from a handful of states run by "misfits, criminals and looney tunes" (could he have had Col. GADAFFI in mind?). He also struck a familiar note by appealing to the international community to act together against terrorism.

This was a tough and uncompromising speech and it was surely predictable once the TWA hijacking was over and the American hostages were back home that the United States would be seeking stronger action against international terrorism, and would want to exact revenge, or mete out some kind of punishment, to those who perpetrated the crime. Having rejected a number of military options i.e. random acts of violence during the crisis, it behoved Mr REAGAN to show he can, and will, respond to hijackings.

It is not going to be easy as the problem of what to do about Beirut airport has already demonstrated. One specific, sensible and even moderate U.S. proposal is that the international community should "isolate" the airport until the security is improved—it has been the scene of seven hijackings this year alone—and should bar flights to and from Beirut by what is widely considered to be the terrorists' favourite airline. Yet Washington's Western allies have come up with all sorts of excuses for not supporting the American plan and it may well founder.

NORA BELOFF finds a discrepancy between what the British army teaches its cadets about their potential foe and how our diplomats are taught to regard it

Why you cannot trust a Russian

THE gentlemen of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, notably those responsible for the Foreign Secretary's speeches, would be well advised to take a refresher course at the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst. There, Mr Christopher Donnelly, head of the Academy's Centre of Soviet studies, teaches our cadets what our policy-framers need to know: that the military doctrine, inculcated into all young Russians regardless of the change of leadership, is founded on the assumption of inveterate Western hostility towards the USSR.

This implies that Soviet national security can best be promoted by ousting Western influence wherever possible and by constantly expanding territories directly or indirectly under Moscow's control.

Thus, though tactics may vary according to who is in charge—and Mr Gorbachev is already readjusting them, the doctrine itself, as Donnelly shows, has tremendous continuity and stability. It compels any Soviet leader to strive for military superiority over the "capitalist" world and to seek to tip in Russia's favour what Marxists call "the international correlation of forces": meaning the economic and political as well as the military factors—though the three sometimes collide with each other.

In implementing the doctrine, Soviet leaders must take into account strategic and geographical factors, secular and successive Russian experiences of previous wars and the emergence of new techniques and nuclear weapons. All this has to be constantly underpinned by hate campaigns against the West, and for these the leadership can draw both on Marxist-Leninist ideology and on the traditions of Russian nationalist xenophobia.

The Russian course being taught at Sandhurst is not as pessimistic as the above suggests: all British specialists, military and civilian, agree that the Soviet leadership would go to almost any length to avoid nuclear war and all predict that, in advancing Soviet interests, Mr Gorbachev, like his predecessors, will prefer a "low risk: low gain" option to the "high risk: high gain" alternative, which might have been acceptable in the prenuclear age.

But what our cadets, though not our diplomats, are being taught is that the Soviet leaders, unlike ourselves, believe that war, however undesirable, is a normal part of international relations and that soldiers and civilians need to be moulded into an effective and ever-ready war machine.

Further, our soldiers learn that there is not much that the West can do to alleviate Soviet hostility: the very existence of Western societies does indeed constitute a threat to Soviet stability as it demonstrates the viability—not to say superiority—of non-Marxist alternatives. In Donnelly's view however "immoderate" anti-Soviet statements are unwise as they can be used to keep alive permanently inflamed fears of Western aggression.

Shortly before he died, a leading specialist, Prof. Hugh Seton-Watson, published a similar—and inadequately heeded—interpretation of Soviet doctrine: "It would be foolish to assume that the new generation which will soon take over the Soviet Union [as it now has done] will be any easier to live with." The foolishness has spread, unchecked, even though, for anyone who studies Seton-Watson's chilling but remarkably perceptive analysis of Soviet attitudes, the arrival of a healthier, shrewder and more self-confident master at the Kremlin cannot, from the Western viewpoint be anything but bad news.

From the Kremlin's point of view, as Seton-Watson showed, the system "has worked pretty well," both in turning the Soviet-Union into the world's mightiest military force and in securing power and privilege for those on top. To the frequently-asked question, can Soviet leaders really believe in the "scientific truth" of Marxist-Leninism, the professor offered the suggesttion that political chiefs leave the theoretical abstractions to their specialists and content themselves with "the dogma in potted form: "the conviction that history imposes a permanent struggle between the Communist and "Capitalist" world and that whatever setbacks the Soviet Union may encounter, the future belongs with them. This is the view which according to the defector, Arkady Shevchenko, serves as a "practical guide to Mr Gromyko."

Far from siding with extremists who argue that there are no issues on which the East and West can usefully negotiate, Seton-Watson considered diplomacy to be as necessary as defence. But he contrasted Western tendencies to think that once diplomats are sitting round the green baize table, all public polemics must be avoided, with the Soviet maintenance of an uninterrupted flood of anti-Western abuse.

British negotiators consistently ignore two of what Seton-Watson defined as "basic truths" about relations with the Soviet Union. First, there is a permanent conflict of interests between them and us, which will continue for as long as Soviet leaders identify their own security with the expansion of areas under Soviet control. Sir Geoffrey Howe, on the contrary, recently called for "a deeper understanding of either side's real concern as a prerequisite for useful negotiations.

And whereas Seton-Watson insisted on the fundamental difference between the moralities prevailing on the two sides, with the Russians bound to give absolute priority to what they consider Soviet interests, regardless of treaties or pledges, Sir Geoffrey goes on talking as if both sides operated under the same moral restraints. Thus having proffered "inordinate patience and endless effort" to reach agreement with the new Soviet leaders, he claims: "We have the right to expect a similar effort from the other side."

The Soviet realities summed up by Seton-Watson were put in homelier terms by the former Foreign Secretary, Lord Home in a recent House of Lords debate. Referring to Soviet violations of treaties he had personally helped to negotiate, Lord Home said this posed the insistent question: "How, with the ideology of your way of life, is it possible to think and to talk in terms of trust?" He neatly paraphrased Kremlin policy—under Mr Gorbachev or anyone else: "Military confrontation, no. Struggle, yes."

In the subsequent debate, however, most peers whether Tory, Alliance or Labour, echoed received media opinion that Mr Gorbachev's arrival opened a new chapter in East-West relations and felt closer to the government view, as expounded by Lord Trefgarne. Promising proper respect for the Soviet Union's "legitimate security interests," the Minister said that, during Mr Gorbachev's visit to London, "we were given a full and clever account of Soviet thinking at the highest level."

The same line was taken by the head of Chatham House, Adml Sir James Eberle, in a letter to all members earlier this year: "Mr Gorbachev's recent visit and our growing and closer contacts with the Institute of World Economic and International Affairs in Moscow show what opportunities there are for reducing mutual misunderstanding between East and West."

The Prime Minister, wanting to be re-elected, cannot tell us what she thinks of the Soviet Union any more than Dr Owen or Mr Healey can, because, as Seton-Watson wrote, whenever Western statesmen draw attention to the nature of the Soviet system they arouse cries of "cold war." And this is doubly so since the Professor died, with the advent of the affable Mr Gorbachev, flanked by his trim little wife.

Fortunately, however, while always making war-avoidance their top priority, some members of the Government, notably Mr Malcolm Rifkind, and some of the younger generation coming up in the FCO and Cabinet Office, unflinchingly accept the inevitability of the East-West struggle. When these want to know what the Soviet Union is up to, it is not from official Moscow delegations that they seek enlightenment.

LONDON DAY BY DAY

Bottomley shows off his union ties

PETER BOTTOMLEY, the able and witty junior Employment Minister, is the sole member of the Government proudly to sport a Transport and General Workers' Union tie—even wearing it in No 10 Downing Street under the disapproving gaze of Mrs Thatcher.

Bottomley, 40, tells me he has worn the maroon tie since he became a member of the TGWU in 1971 when he occasionally drove a lorry. "In the evening it looks like a Paras' tie and in the daytime it helps break the ice with trade unionists," he explained.

He added that a senior union official had spotted it one day and commented: "You must be a very long serving member because Moss Evans got rid of that design 10 years ago."

As a former Westminster boy he added: "I think that if you can't wear an Old Etonian tie then the TGWU is the next best club."

Consul's file

I HEAR whispers that the Foreign Office is preparing another major step in the process of normalisation of relations with Argentina, three years after Britain regained the Falklands.

Having lifted Britain's trade embargo with Argentina this week the next step will be the resumption of limited diplomatic relations, almost certainly at the consular level.

The best bet is for an announcement some time next month.

Perhaps animal rights campaigners have a sense of humour after all. An anonymous protester who daubs slogans outside a Buckinghamshire snail farm signs himself Les Scargill.

All squared

THE NEXT defector from Conservative Central Office to the lucrative and powerful world of Parliamentary lobbying will, I understand, be Peter Houlden who looks after the Yorkshire area for the Tories.

As I reported yesterday Nigel Clarke, who heads the political desk as the research department, is also moving to greener pastures in public relations. Houlden, too, has been headhunted by another leading PR firm—Burson Masteller.

Riddle of the sands

BRITISH embassy staff in the Saudi Arabian Red Sea port of Jeddah are beginning to sweat over the prospect of insulting their oil-rich hosts.

Foreign diplomats were told back in 1975 that all missions in Jeddah would have to be transferred to a purpose-built complex outside Riyadh, which the Saudi Royal family now considers to be the country's true capital. The deadline given by the Saudi's was mid-August but, despite the fact that no other countries have encountered difficulties meeting it, Britain is many, many weeks behind schedule.

The delay has been blamed by our "dips" on Government cuts to the £20 million needed for the move. Some delt diplomacy may be required to explain this false economy to the Saudis.

Overheard at the Royal Engineers' Ball at Chatham last week: "It's worse than the Falklands in here—you have to fight for every square inch of floorspace."

Cardinal sin?

ALTHOUGH no scandalous tale of impropriety surrounds the rare Regency miniature portrait of Cardinal Thomas Weld with his daughter — which sold for a record £55,000 at Sotheby's on Monday — the 19th-century prelate was adept at causing raised eyebrows.

On one occasion Weld, who became a priest after the early death of his wife and was elevated to a Cardinal in 1850, baptised his own grandson during a secret papal conclave in Rome. Since no one was allowed in or out of the Vatican's inner sanctum while the princes of the church were choosing the next Pope, the baby had to be smuggled through a serving hatch on a food warming tray.

With such an auspicious start it was perhaps no surprise that the child, later Lord Henry Clifford, became one of the first soldiers to be awarded a Victoria Cross during the Crimea War.

Neither a borrower . . .

A COLLEAGUE who lent a German newspaperman £5 in Frankfurt the other day has — on arriving home in London received a cheque for the debt in Deutschemarks.

But the business of cashing the cheque has hardly proved lucrative since apart from the poor rate of exchange, the bank charged him £5 commission plus 10p expenses and 60p for the entry. Retiring disgusted, our man hurled the offending money order into the nearest wastepaper bin.

Few things could be more redolent of rural England than the names of its village cricket sides. Through to the final rounds of this year's national village championships are such sides as Troon, Langleybury, Bomarsund, Glynde and, most delightfully, Great and Little Tew.

Clerical aspirations

A NEW FAVOURITE is emerging in the field to succeed Dr Edward Carpenter as the next Dean of Westminster.

I have mentioned that Dr Edward Norman, the Dean of Peterhouse, Cambridge, has been widely tipped, particularly as the position, one of the most important in the Church of England, comes under the patronage of 10 Downing Street and Mrs Thatcher is certain to want to replace Carpenter with a cleric more in tune with her views on CND.

The new dark horse in the race, I understand, could prove to be Dr Graham Routledge, the present Canon in residence at St Paul's Cathedral. Trained as a lawyer, he stood — unsuccessfully — as the Tory candidate for Birkenhead in 1959.

Although he resigned from the Tory party before taking Holy Orders, his political outlook is still thought to coincide closely with that of the present Government.

Its a long story

THE RECENT sailing of the Navy's new aircraft carrier, Ark Royal, with cleaners still on board, reminds a reader of the travels of HMS Colossus which was commissioned at Newcastle in December, 1944.

The carrier's company was expecting to visit Portsmouth for a few days before the Colossus sailed in March, 1945, to join the British Pacific Fleet.

What must surely qualify as the longest-ever journey from Newcastle to Portsmouth ended more than 19 months later — a 72,000-mile course which took in such disparate ports as Gibraltar, Aden, Trincomalee, Madras, Fremantle, Manila, Hongkong Java and Durban.

A R.I.P. off?

AN advertisement in the New Forest Post for a firm of memorial sculptors asks: "Did you know that provision is now made in all New Forest District Council's Cemeteries (as well as our own churchyards) for the internment and commemoration of cremated remains . . . and that we have the best selection."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

AN INITIATIVE TO BE BACKED

From Sir FREDERIC BENNETT, M P (Con.) and others

"THE Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972 imposes no limitation on the performance of research and experimental work aimed at resolving the problem of defending one's country against nuclear missile attack." So declared the then Soviet Minister of Defence, Marshal Grechko.

Certainly the Kremlin has during the last 13 years fully taken advantage of this reservation.

One can then ask why it is that the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament and their ilk, who still insist they are not politically biased, have only now launched a virulent campaign against the United States for, too tardily in the view of many of us, following Russia's example: especially since the Soviet Union has proceeded beyond research and deployed an anti-ballistic missile system around Moscow.

Perhaps we are also entited to seek clarification why CND, still claiming dedication to ending the threat of global nuclear war, shows such intense hostility to the development of a non-nuclear, purely defensive, weaponry system, which offers the best hope of one day achieving their declared objective, without relying solely, as now, on a retaliatory, offensive deterrent, i.e. Mutual Assured Destruction.

We have returned from Washington (as members of a Western European Union Committee actively concerned with these issues) totally convinced that the American Administration, backed by the vast majority of American public opinion, is absolutely determined to make Strategic Defence Initiative (SDI) a success; however stridently anti-American Leftist elements in Europe may seek to dissuade them.

For it is well recognised in Washington that whereas Europe was in a position successfully to bring pressure to prevent the deployment of the "neutron bomb" and, albeit happily unsuccessfully in the end result, in regard to the deployment of Cruise and Pershing missiles in Europe, there is no comparable chance of influencing the future of SDI. For this does not rely for its success on European co-operation, although Washington would welcome it.

Of course there are some distinguished scientists and others in the United States who doubt whether, whatever the resources devoted to the project, it will ever be effective. We should, however, recall similar doubts being expressed, right up to the eleventh hour, about the possibility of an American landing on the Moon!

Nor do such critics tell us why it is that if, in fact, SDI is such a crazy and futile enterprise, the Soviet Union has made its first priority political objective, at all costs, to stop the Americans carrying on with their programme.

For most Europeans the choice is quite clear: The Americans are going to proceed with the research development programme of SDI under the terms of the 1972 Treaty, whether we like it or not.

Since this is so, it surely makes sense to collaborate with our allies, to ensure that whatever anti-nuclear weaponry defence systems evolve, these will include a capability to destroy SS20 and other medium range offensive missiles directed against n[illegible] as well as the Intercontinental B[illegible] missiles threatening the United States.

Disproportionate power for smaller groups

SIR—Mr Bernard Black argues (July 6) that because proportional representation has been used in Northern Ireland for Assembly and European Parliament elections, its superiority is proved.

This is to misunderstand completely the purpose of these elections. These were for representative assemblies; a British General Election produces not only an assembly but a government.

The trouble with PR is that it appears to be fair and reasonable on the surface while it is in fact quite undemocratic.

The electorate now chooses a government by a straightforward process which everyone understands. Under the single transferable vote system of proportional representation they would choose (by a process that few would understand and even fewer would trust) politicians who would choose a government for them.

The crucial power of choosing between manifestoes and leaders would pass from the people to the politicians. Coalitions which often give a disproportionate amount of power to small groups would be the norm and only those involved would know what deals had been struck behind the electorate's back. The voters, persuaded that five votes must be as democratic as one, could be safely ignored.

The fact that the present system is imperfect seems to me a poor argument for replacing it with one that is manifestly worse. The anomaly that produces minority victors (as in Brecon and Radnor) could be ended by introducing a second ballot system on the French pattern.

Of course this would not help the minority parties as much as P.R. so we hear little of it.

MARY KILBRIDE

Growing dissatisfaction

SIR—Mr John Wakefield's letter (July 6) on electoral reform reflects several misconceptions about the workings of both our election systems and those of other countries.

It is not the case that with our system "the governing party will usually have won more than 50 per cent. of the votes." The last Government to have been elected by a majority was that of 1935, while no Government since 1970 has obtained more than 45 per cent. of the vote.

Nor is he correct in assuming that a fairer system would result in "a permanent multi-party system and government by shifting coalitions." Ireland with the single transferable vote has usually had single-party governments, while West Germany with a different proportional system has an enviable record of political stability. In both countries there are fewer parties in the legislature than in ours.

Whether we change our system or not, it is unlikely we will return to the two-party system that prevailed before 1970. Since then, Northern Ireland has ceased to return a solid Unionist block taking the Conservative Whip, the nationalist parties have become a significant factor, the environmental movement is growing and dissatisfaction with both Labour and the Conservatives has resulted in the Alliance parties establishing themselves as a probably permanent force.

Lastly, in October, 1974, the Conservatives got only 36 per cent. of the vote. Opinion polls and the Brecon result suggest that at the next election their share may well fall below that level and that they may become the group of M Ps "elected by fewer than a third of the voters" he refers to.

Should that happen, they would be the minority party with less than 100 seats. Would Mr Wakefield continue to hold the same views in that event?

M. CATTON

Entrenched opinions

SIR—Your report (July 5) on the Public Accounts Committee's investigation into the General Dental Services of the National Health Service gives a rather one-sided look at a much-maligned profession. The image of "get rich dentists," seems firmly entrenched in public opinion. It is, however, an untrue picture

Both the Committee and your Health Services Correspondent have failed to grasp the complexities of the system of remuneration for dentists. My Association submitted a memorandum to the Committee, which is reprinted in full in their report. We pointed out some of the inaccuracies and illogicalities of the original report by the Comptroller and Auditor General, on which so much of this new report is based.

Space does not permit me to go into the report in any detail but suffice it to say, that we regard many of the figures as, at best, misleading; at worst, inaccurate.

On a more positive note we are pleased to see that the Committee has taken up our Association's suggestions for implementation of the Dental Strategy Review Group's 1981 Report; especially the move towards prevention in dentistry playing a greater role in the Health Service.

Where earnings are under 'decency threshold'

SIR—Mr Michael Fallon (July 1) has misinterpreted the problems of the North. His panacea for high unemployment and industrial decline stresses the need for greater flexibility in wages and greater labour mobility. Northern workers, he claims, are on average too highly paid: if unemployment is to be tackled, workers must price themselves back into jobs, wherever these jobs may be.

Yet average wages in the North-East and Cumbria are six per cent. lower than the national average. One quarter of full-time women earn less than £80 despite working a full week plus overtime. In all, one-third of the full-time workforce in the North earns less than the Council of Europe's "decency threshold" of £108 a week or £2·75 an hour. When part-timers are included, the number of low paid in the region approaches 450,000, more than 42 per cent. of the workforce.

Despite this, unemployment has more than doubled since 1979 and at 20 per cent. is the highest rate in Great Britain. Notably, in the South-East, where the unemployment rate is lowest, average wages are highest.

To suggest that lower wages in the North can cure unemployment is a nonsense. Lower pay means less money to spend, a lower demand for local goods and services and decreased business activity. Encouraging wage undercutting destabilises the business environment. Where local councils have contracted out direct labour operations — as Mr Fallon would like to see—wages and conditions have declined, at great cost to workers and their families. But employment and efficiency have typically declined in these circumstances.

At a time when the unemployed outnumber job vacancies by at least 12 to one, it is also ridiculous to suggest that physical mobility in the labour market will seriously alleviate unemployment.

People in the North cannot afford to wait for private enterprise to invest in a regeneration of their economy. Much of that activity to date has merely depressed wage levels and created an uncertain, anarchic business environment.

If a sound, economic base, providing useful jobs and decent pay levels, is to be established in the region, then it is clear that we must look beyond the path of privatisation.

A party for teachers

SIR—I refer to your Education Correspondent's comments about the Royal Garden Party for teachers on exchange (July 1).

The contribution of the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret, over many years, to this annual occasion has indeed been outstanding and thousands of teachers throughout the Commonwealth, the United States and, in more recent years, countries of Europe, will never forget the excitement of the event.

To say, however, that this year's Royal Garden Party "was made noteworthy by the absence of the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret" is rather a negative way of putting it. You could (perhaps should), have said that it "was made noteworthy by the presence, for the first time, of the Princess of Wales," as indeed it was. She was an absolutely delightful hostess and for all of us present made it a wonderful Royal occasion.

The numbers actually present were 329 from the Commonwealth, 171 from the United States and 42 from Europe.

Sexual Offences Bill

From Lord KILBRACKEN

SIR—Your reporter, Miss Valerie Elliott, hasn't got it quite right when she states (July 6) that kerb-crawlers may be fined up to £400 for soliciting persistently and "if they do so in a frightening manner, as much as £2,000."

The clause making it a separate offence to cause fear was deleted by an amendment moved by the sponsor of the Bill, Lady Vickers, at committee stage in the House of Lords.

It will now become an offence for a man to solicit persistently whether or not he is in a motor vehicle; or, from a motor vehicle, or having just got "out of or off" a motor vehicle, if he causes nuisance or annoyance though not persistent.

Penalties are the same in both cases.

JOHN KILBRACKEN

Lord Lane blames TV violence for nastier crime

By TERENCE SHAW Legal Correspondent

VIOLENCE in films and television, including news reports, has contributed to an "alarming increase" in the nastiness of crime, Lord Lane, Lord Chief Justice, said yesterday.

He said it was "now accepted as common form that once you have your victim on the ground, you kick him, preferably in the stomach or on the head where the blows are likely to do maximum injury."

It happened in almost every film and television play, so it was not surprising that it had become an acceptable form of violence in the eyes of many people.

Speaking last night at the Lord Mayor's dinner for judges in London, he said people were imitative in character and the weaker the character, the more imitative they were likely to be. "So thanks to TV and quite often thanks to TV news reports, violence is self-perpetuating."

He described attacks on old people as "a comparatively new and particularly horrifying manifestation" of the increasing nastiness of crime.

Drug abuse

Turning to the problems of drug abuse, he said there was an urgent need for legislation to enable courts to strip drug traffickers of their profits.

Although legislation is being prepared by the Home Office for enactment in the next session of Parliament, Lord Lane said there seemed to be few signs of urgency.

"How many more years will go by, how many more children and young persons will have to die degrading deaths before action is taken?" he said.

Lord Lane called for an in-depth review of the parole system and its relationship to sentencing by the courts.

He said that providing more types of punishment and more methods of disposal for criminals had had no effect in reducing the crime rate.

But they had made the task of the judge in deciding what to do with the person in the dock "hideously difficult".

This difficulty had been compounded by changes in the parole rules which were increasing the gap — already great enough — between what the court ordered and what happens to the criminal.

Dr David Thomas of Cambridge University, who is a consultant to the Judicial Studies Board, claimed recently that extension of the parole system had reduced custodial sentencing in Crown Courts to a "complete farce".

Last year's parole extension reduced from 12 to six months the minimum period that an offender sentenced to imprisonment or youth custody must serve before he is eligible for release on parole.

In a recent article in the journal JUSTICE OF THE PEACE Dr Thomas claimed the effect of the changes was often to make nonsense of the distinctions between sentences imposed by the Crown Courts, and caused real injustice to those held in custody before sentence for an appreciable time.

No complacency

Lord Hailsham, Lord Chancellor, commenting on the review of civil procedure which had just began, said that while he believed our system of justice was the best in the world, there was no room for complacency.

The best law was useless if the means of administering it were ineffective.

Procedural inefficiency led to an absence of remedies and became a "source of harm distributing benefit to the undeserving and loss to the innocent." Justice delayed was not merely justice denied but may become justice perverted.

His programme for review of civil procedure was to be completed by the end of 1987 although steps to implement change would take longer.

TV-am SUES BBC FOR £100,000

TV-a.m. yesterday began a High Court action claiming damages of more than £100,000 from the BBC for "pirating" its exclusive interview with Princess Michael of Kent in April.

The independent breakfast television station's claim will go before the BBC Governors and Mr Bill Cotton, BBC Television's managing director. The BC has 14 days to prepare its defence.

Sanctuary pair agree to leave country

By GUY RAIS

A GREEK Cypriot couple who have spent the last 132 days in a London church to escape deportation finally agreed last night to leave Britain within 14 days.

Vassilis Nicola, 35, and his wife, Katarina, 38, who had been in England for the past nine years after escaping from the Turkish invasion of Cyprus and coming to Britain, had been fighting a decision to deport them back to the island.

Mr Justice Woolf in the High Court yesterday refused to grant them leave to seek a judicial review of the Home Secretary's decision not to revoke a deportation order.

The couple, who had been living with friends in East London, moved into St Mary's Anglican Church in Eversholt Street, Camden, with the approval of the vicar, the Rev Philip Dyson, invoking sanctuary in the church, in April when Mr Brittan's final decision not to revoke the deportation order was made.

But after telling friends that they would continue to remain inside the church despite the order, the couple, according to the Home Office, agreed to leave Britain within 14 days and return to Cyprus, where their families are still living in the Greek Cypriot half.

The Home Office Minister of State, Mr Waddington, made it clear last night in a statement that because of the couple's willingness to leave, they would be free to stay with friends before they left with certain restrictions.

Strong statements

Giving judgment, Mr Justice Woolf said the case had attracted "strong statements of sympathy from well-wishers and representations from MPs, members of the House of Lords, the European Parliament, and the Church.

But, said the judge, the court's only function was to decide if there was an arguable case.

Although the Home Secretary had a duty to compare the couple's circumstances with those of other Greek Cypriot "over-stayers" in Britain, he also had to look at the wider canvas.

The case underlined the great problems faced by those responsible for immigration controls. "If they go wrong in law the courts must be astute to protect persons in the position of the Nicolas.

"However, unless there is an arguable case put forward on their behalf that would justify the granting of the application, it would be an unkindness to grant leave and prolong the agony they have been undergoing for a very long time.

'Father' of Dan Dare and the Mekon dies

By JENNY SHIELDS

FRANK HAMPSON, 66, creator of Dan Dare, the comic strip space hero, has died in Epsom after a long illness.

Mr Hampson, a retired college lecturer, dreamed up the character which enthralled a generation of schoolboys after watching German rockets over Antwerp in 1939.

After the war he studied at art college and started tinkering with the idea of a "whodunnit" comic strip featuring Dorothy Dare, a character loosely based on his wife.

He was approached by a Stockport clergyman who wanted to start a national magazine, and together Mr Hampson and the Rev. Marcus Morris drew up a dummy paper.

It became the EAGLE. From 1950 until 1960, Hampson worked on the comic, also creating the Mekon, Digby, and Harris Tweed. Then he became a college lecturer.

The comic, which folded in 1970, is now eargerly sought by collectors.

Mr Hampson, who in 1975 was hailed as the world's *greatest cartoonist by adjudi*cators at the International Exhibition of Comics and Animated Film, saw many of his comic strip fantasies become reality.

There was Anastasia, the swing-wing plane he drew in 1952; then astronauts emerged from their space craft tethered in the way Dan used to be.

Mr Hampson is survived by his wife, Dorothy, and son Peter.

TWO SELLAFIELD CHARGES FAIL

On the 24th day of the Sellafield nuclear waste trial at Carlisle Crown Court, Mr Justice Rose instructed the jury yesterday to find British Nuclear Fuels not guilty of two of the five charges they face.

The company was cleared of failing to keep adequate records of radioactive materials stored on part of the site, while a charge of failing to control radioactive material so it could not escape was also dropped following almost two days of legal argument. The hearing was adjojurned until today.

Nato chiefs revisits PoW haunts

THE COMMANDER-in-Chief of All Allied Forces in central Europe visitied Britain on a double mission yesterday —to review some of the 500,000 men in his command and to return to the Scottish farm where he was once a German prisoner of war.

Leopold Chalupa last saw the highland farm north of Glasgow as a German private in 1949.

The former Hitler Youth member had been captured by the British as a 17-year-old near Trieste at the end of the 1939-45 War and after a spell fo captivity in Italy he was transferred to Scotland. He worked on the land planting potatoes and milking cows before being repatriated to Germany.

Today, as General Leopold Chalupa, he will return to the farm for a reunion with the farmer's wife, now aged 94, who took care of him during his stay.

Yesterday the Nato chief visited the 2nd Infantry Division based at Imphal Barracks, York.

Iberia denies disruption

By Our Air Correspondent

IBERIA yesterday denied disruption of holiday flights to Spain would increase despite a High Court ruling in London that the Spanish flag carrier coul dnot bring an action in the English courts over Government threats to cut its services to London.

"There is not and, as far as we are aware, there never has been any prospect of disruption on holiday flights as a result of proceedings in the High Court," an Iberia spokesman said. "Our lawyers did not warn during the hearing that retaliatory action would be taken."

The row began last October when Iberia accepted British Airways' proposal to increase flights between London and Madrid from 14 to 20 a week, but said the Spanish government would not let the British carrier have the first flight out of Madrid each morning.

The British Government responded b ythreatening to cut Iberia's flights from 14 to 11 a week, accusing Spain of breaking the air agreement between the two countries.

The Spanish airline is to appeal against the High Court ruling and the British Government is to conduct a formal inquiry before deciding whether to cut Iberia's services.

Flood of complaints over holiday switches

By STEPHEN BATES

A FLOOD of complaints from customers whose holidays have been drastically rearranged at the last moment has forced the Association of British Travel Agents urgently to review its code of conduct for tour operators.

Some Bristol holidaymakers found they were not going to Italy as they had thought, but to Yugoslavia.

And one South Yorkshire family was told the day before their flight that the trip had been transferred from East Midlands airport, Leicestershire, to Birmingham airport, 40 miles away, and moved forward from the morning to the middle of the night.

There are also allegations of some operators advertising non-existent holidays, then switching customers.

An ABTA spokesman said: "We have reprimanded two companies recently relating to the cancellation of tours."

MP steps in

The holidaymakers' plight has been taken up by Mr Michael Stern, Conservative MP for Bristol North West.

He has threatened to table questions to the Department of Trade, and may apply for an adjournment debate in the Commons next week.

ABTA says this summer's problems have been caused by a drop in the number of people going t Spain fllowing a 20 per cent. average increase in holiday prices there, and the fact that more people are booking holidays at the last moment.

Sanctions against tour operators can include reprimands, fines "up to several thousand pounds," and expulsion from the association.

MINISTERS MEET

Cheaper air fares

Our Air Correspondent writes: Britain's campaign for cheaper air fares in Europe was extended to France yesterday, with exploratory talks between the two ministers responsible for aviation, Mr Michael Spicer and M. Jean Auroux.

Last night France agreed to hold official talks on the fares. They are planned for early September, and will also cover opening Gatwick and Orly for new services.

The pair also discussed air security and measures to control skyjacking, including President Reagan's call for a boycott of Beirut airport.

PARIS-MADRID LINK

France and Spain are to hold annual foreign ministers' meetings, according to a joint statement signed in Paris yesterday in the presence of President Mitterrand and King Juan Carlos.

Until Arsenal first gave their players numbers in 1928, radio commentators had a hard time telling footballers apart. But it wasn't until this year that Mobil could claim a number all of its own – 100 years of doing business in Britain.

Age, however, isn't everything.

We'd rather be known for a few other things. Such as introducing fully synthesised engine lubricants to the UK and still today being able to claim the world's most advanced motor oil – Mobil 1 Rally Formula. Or being the first to inject gas into a UK North Sea oil field instead of burning it off. That helps us to get more oil out and at the same time saves the gas for later use.

All things that count far more than anniversaries.

STOCK markets were dominated by a surge of strength in sterling, a factor which encouraged fresh demand for government securities, but brought new uncertainties in leading equities with major dollar earnings.

On an individual sector basis, building issues sprang into the limelight on hopes of early government action to allocate more money for repairs to Britain's infrastructure and, with jobbers none too well supplied with stock, the sector recorded widespread and sometimes substantial gains. In contrast, the electrical and electronic sector suffered another bear raid and a number of the leaders plumbed fresh lows.

In the event, the overall condition of the market was very mixed and the afternoon announcement of the money supply statistics did little to help the situation since the figures were judged to be "meaningless" in terms of special factors such as the Abbey Life flotation.

Heavy losses in the main market indices reflected weakness in leaders such as Imperial Chemical Industries, 17 down at 712p after 709p, B T R, 13 off at 325p, and Beecham Group, 7 lower at 313p after 310p. The "30" index dropped 19·2 to 932p its biggest fall since February 12 and the "100" index 18·6 to 1239·6, but jobbers admitted that in a market almost devoid of buying interest, the day's losses were out-of-proportion to the amount of selling.

Prior to the announcement of the money supply figures, the market in government securities was in good form, but even allowing for the special circumstances, the actual outturn resulted in a more cautious view of the monetary situation. Early gains were pared and sometimes completely eliminated and the final picture was one of small mixed changes.

Deteriorating market conditions gave no help to what already looked to be a rocky start to trading in two market newcomers. Saphire Petroleum which were offered at 150p, opened at a miserable 123p and ended at 118p, while Bradstock, issued at 170p, managed a 3 premium at 173p, after 165p.

Leading bank shares enjoyed renewed strength in early business, but prices turned easier in the afternoon and Midland closed 5 down at 389p, after 397p. Barclays ended 2 off at 417p, after 424p, and National Westminster 5 easier at 712p, after 719p. Exco International lost 7 more to 192p on further consideration of the Telerate sale, while Reuters "B," worried by fears of Telerate competition, were 13 lower at 305p.

Schroders, recently in the limelight following the Japanese bank link-up, were again wanted at 838p, a rise of 25. Mercantile House also attracted buyers and ended 10 up at 240p, after 244p.

Best prices for building issues were not always fully maintained but rises of 8 to 10p were scored by Blue Circle Industries, at 520p, after 525p. Tarmac, at 310p, after 318p, Amec, at 261p, after 266p, Alfred MacAlpine, at 266p, J Mowlem, at 236p, R M C, at 360p, after 364p, and Redland, at 286p, after 290p. Newarthill advanced 20 to 710p, but Cookson Group ran into profit-taking and reacted 16 to 332p.

Uncertainty about dollar earnings prospects following the strength of sterling undermined Jaguar, 10 down at 256p, Hawker Siddeley, 9 off at 397p, and Reed International, 23 lower at 624p.

Christies International, also affected by the weaker dollar, ended 8 off at 253p, with the shares additionally unsettled by the company's acknowledgement of an "erroneous statement" in connection with the 1981 auction at the Manhattan Gallery.

Thorn-E M I, still reflecting the recent poor statement, fell to a low of 301p before closing 3p easier at 309p. Plessey, also hitting a low, finished 8 down at 116p, while G E C slipped 4 to 162p and Racal Electronics 6 to 130p.

Other dull spots included Cable & Wireless, 15 off at 525p, and A B Electronics, 12 down at 225p.

Further profit-taking saw Pentland Industries react afresh to 705p, but buyers quickly appeared on the scene and the shares recovered well to 765p, a gain of 20p. Cheap buyers were also in the market for Body Shop, which ended 20 higher at 673p.

The shares of Smith Brothers climbed 11 to 136p, after 138p, on revived suggestions of a possible full-scale offer for the company. Dealers liked the interim report from Securiguard, 11 higher at 153p, but half-time statements failed to help Associated Newspapers, 20 down at 890p, and Daily Mail Trust, £½ off at £11¾.

Sellers held the stage in Vickers, 12 off at 273p (the market is still awaiting the result of the company's compensation claim to the Strasbourg Court). G K N, 10 lower at 224p, and Metal Box, 9 down at 451p. Against the trend, Parkfield Foundries improved 3 more to a high of 91p.

With the money supply figures dampening hopes for a reduction in base rates, at least on the short-term, property shares were looking vulnerable. M E P C were the centre of attention after news of the Canadian acquisition, but closed 14 lower at 257p. Land Securities ended 9 down at 260p.

Further consideration of the company's tidying-up operation stimulated support for British & Commonwealth, which advanced to 265p before closing 5 better at 258p. Caledonia Investment moved in sympathy, ending 5 better at 258p, after 245p.

The announcement that the Burton Group bid for Debenhams was not to be referred to the Monopolies Commission stirred market thoughts about possible new developments in the takeover situation. Debenhams rose to 391p before ending a shade easier at 384p, while Burton closed unchanged at 461p, after 464p.

In the absence of any firm developments at the Opec meeting, oil shares were in the grip of the "uncertainty" factor, hence a situation where small sellers prompted a generally weaker tone. "Shell" Transport finished 12 down at 683p, while Lasmo were similarly lower at 253p.

British Petroleum fell 4 to 523p, Britoil 8 to 207p, and Ultramar 7 to 193p. Among the second-liners, Petranol reacted 25 to 145p.

Bullion was 25 cents firmer at $315·50 but gold shares themselves succumbed to the general gloom. Randfontein, at £75½, and Vaal Reefs, at £65, both lost £1½, while President Brand, at £18⅛, Western Deep, at £32⅝, and Kloof, at £30, were all around £¾ lower.

Tailpiece

YESTERDAY'S excitement in the building share sector infrastructure spending hopes saw a further improvement in our old favourite, French-Kier. Trafalgar House recently announced that it had increased its stake in French-Kier from 14·9 p.c. to 25·2 p.c. as a "trade investment", but this is an unusually large holding for such a purpose and many observers believe that it is only a matter of time before Trafalgar bids for the rest.

Prospective government action to spend money on roads, public buildings, bridges and sewers may influence Trafalgar thinking and encourage a full takeover offer in the fairly near future.

The shares originally recommended here at 31½p, now stand at 186p and seem likely to show further appreciation. Hold tight.

Woodrow rights success

DESPITE initial adverse market reaction Taylor Woodrow's one-for-five rights issue to raise £13·7m has gone well. Of the new shares 92·4 p.c. have been taken up by shareholders and the balance sold in the market at a 50p premium to the 370p offer price.

Taylor Woodrow shares fell sharply in line with the market after the cash call announcement. The shares have led the strong recovery seen in the contracting and construction sector this month and after beginning July at 388p, closed 7 higher at 435p last night—matching their pre-rights issue announcement level.

Intasun warning

SHORTLY after two of its directors raised more than £2m on share sales, holiday group Intasun Leisure Group has forecast lower underlying profits for the year to March 1986. According to the Stock Exchange Weekly Official Intelligence chairman Harry Goodman and deputy chairman Stephen Matthews recently sold a total of 1·8m shares in the company at prices around 120p each.

Pre-tax profits from the group for the year to March 31, 1985 increased from £16·5m to £24·8m including £13·1m of exceptional profits. The group has forecast current year profits similar to last year's but this time "exceptional credits" are expected to be around £15m.

The final dividend is to be raised from 2·4p net to 2·8p for a total of 4·8p against 4·4p, payable Aug. 30.

Associated News up

ASSOCIATED Newspapers Holdings reports pre-tax profits of £16·4m for the period ended March 31 compared with £8·7m, but there have been accounting changes. The interim dividend rises from 4·5p to 5·5p a share, payable August 22.

The Daily Mail and General Trust is raising its interim dividend from 12p to 15·5p a share after reporting a net profit of £5·39m compared with £3·51m adjusted.

BAA adviser

COUNTY BANK, the National Westminster offshoot handling the privatisation of National Bus yesterday won the merchant banking contest to act as advisers to the Transport Department for the sale of the British Airports Authority, tentatively planned for next year.

New members

THE London Gold Market, which includes the five fixing members who daily agree the London gold price has accepted 26 new associate member firms, bringing its membership to 11. New members include firms which belong to the defunct London Gold Futures Market.

Japan's record

JAPAN'S custom cleared trade surplus increased to $5·2bn in in June from $3·56bn in May and $4·01bn in June last year. Japan's surplus for the first six months of 1985 totalled $17.66bn, surpassing the previous record of $13.5bn in the corresponding half of 1984.

Steel talks dropped

CRA, the Australian arm of Rio Tinto-Zinc, and two West German steel companies, have suspended steel merger talks which would have led to the rationalisation of the steel making facilities of Krupp Stahl and Kloerkner Werke.

The programme required the support of West German governments at both State and Federal levels, but this could not be achieved within the necessary deadline.

Gold steady

THE dollar's weakness had only moderate impact on the London gold price yesterday which closed 25 cents higher at $315·50, but gold shares were nervous and the FT Gold Mines Index closed 10·3 points down at 405·2, a low for the year.

Midland buys back control of Montagu

By ANNE SEGALL

MIDLAND BANK is buying back full control of its merchant banking subsidiary Samuel Montagu almost three years to the day after it sold a 40 p.c. stake to American insurance giant Aetna Life and Casualty.

An announcement is expected within the next 48 hours, although a spokesman for Midland would only confirm yesterday that "talks are continuing."

Midland is believed to be paying a heavy price for unwinding what has become an increasingly unhappy relationship with Aetna. The Americans have found it particularly hard to support Midland's plan to expand Montagu's securities and trading operations.

The deal values Aetna's stake at around £65 million, roughly what the Americans originally paid. There is, however, a loss for Aetna in dollar terms.

The Americans have organised a swap with Midland whereby they will get full control of Montagu's successful investment management subsidiary in return for selling out of the rest of Montagu.

It is understood that the swap deal values Montagu Investment Management at between £40 million and £50 million, which is regarded as generous in City circles.

In addition to taking full control at MIM the Americans will receive £30 million in cash for their stake in Samuel Montagu.

City sources see MIM as the jewel in Montagu's crown and hence a severe loss to Midland. Assets under management at MIM are put at around £5 billion. Once the investment side of Montague is sold Midland will be left with just £2 billion under management in other parts of the group.

Montagu's annual accounts, out yesterday, reveal that MIM was one of the few bright spots during 1984, with the group producing a very disappointing set of results overall.

Profits after tax and transfers to inner reserves fell from £11 million to £5 million, largely because of a huge jump in costs associated with the ambitious expansion programme launched by former chief executive Staffan Gadd.

The accounts revealed that Mr Gadd, who resigned in December, received a rise from £139,000 to the equivalent of £198,000 in his salary last year and was also given compensation of £137,000 for the loss of his job.

The overall salary bill at Montagu rose by more than half last year, reflecting the recruitment of high-flying executives throughout the group.

Midland has already made it clear that it intends to take a tight grip on Montagu's planned expenditure and will also integrate the merchant bank more fully within the Midland group once it has bought out Aetna's stake.

Montagu is to become the international capital markets arm of the Midland group.

Lloyd's expels four but Posgate wins

By MICHAEL BECKET

LLOYD'S has ejected from membership four of the top six executives of Alexander Howden Group over the misappropriation of £55 million which was used partly to set up a bogus privately owned reinsurance company in Panama and partly to buy from Howden a Swiss banking subsidiary.

However, former star underwriter Ian Posgate was successful in his appeal against expulsion and he has been suspended only until next February. But if he wants to return he will have to prove himself a "fit and proper" person before the Lloyd's authorities allow him to own, run or underwrite for a syndicate.

Announcing the decisions yesterday, Lloyd's chief executive Ian Hay Davison said: "It is a matter of great regret that the Director of Public Prosecutions has not seen fit to prose*cute any of the people guilty* of misfeasance." The law must be allowed to take its course, but he added "We hope it will take its course soon."

Kenneth Grob, former Howden chairman, Ronald Comery, deputy chairman, and Mario Benbassat were found guilty of setting up the Panama company with misappropriated funds and reinsuring the syndicates into it. Jack Carpenter pleaded guilty to reinsuring into the company and acquiring the bank with the others, and as a result Lloyd's was "content not to proceed" with the other six charges.

The proceedings against Howden's former finance director Allan Page have been dropped because Mr Page is ill. Mr Posgate was found guilty of buying the bank — though without being able to prove he knew where the money came from — and of receiving a painting by Pissarro intended to bribe him into placing syndicate reinsurance through Howden.

He appealed against the expulsion on the grounds that he received no personal benefit and that the reinsurance was at market rates. An appeals tribunal under former law lord Lord Wilberforce found in his favour and reduced the sentence. Lloyd's has paid £18,000 of his legal costs.

If Lloyd's now tried to bar him that would be "judging the same issue twice" said Mr Posgate yesterday. In that case he would be forced to take the matter to the divisional court over the heads of the Lloyd's appeals procedures. He is currently planning to buy a syndicate management agency and wants only "a quiet life and a small syndi*cate to underwrite for.*"

Mr Grob is beng told to pay £47,000 towards the costs of proceedings against him, Mr Comery £45,500, Mr Benbassat £25,000 and Mr Carpenter "all reasonable costs." The total expenditure by Lloyd's on the Howden proceedings has been more than £1 million, said Mr Davison.

Split threatens trade talks

By FRANCES WILLIAMS

PROGRESS towards a new round of multilateral trade talks has been put in jeopardy by a fundamental split between the industrial countries and some Third World nations on whether trade in services should be included.

A two-day meeting in Geneva of senior officials on the so-called Consultative Group of 18 of GATT — the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade — broke up yesterday with no resolution of the dispute.

The industrial countries, including the United States, Japan and the European Com*munity, are insisting that the* new trade round includes talks to liberalise trade in services, now the biggest generator of wealth and jobs in their economies. But the developing nations fear this could lead to the colonisation of their own incipient service industries.

Brazil, which with India has been the chief spokesman for Third World interests, recently agreed to consider talks on services provided these were held separately from the GATT round. But this suggestion is not acceptable to the industrial countries, especially the United States.

It had been hoped that the consultative group meeting would pave the way for a formal decision at next week's gathering of the GATT council to go ahead with preparations for a new trade round, beginning with a meeting of senior officials in September. There will now be intensive behind-the-scenes lobbying over the coming few days in an effort to find a formula permitting both sides to give the "talks about talks" the green light.

MEPC buys £112·5m portfolio

By BRUCE KINLOCH

MEPC is paying £112·5 million for the English Property Corporation portfolio which is owned by the Canadian Olympia & York Developments, a company controlled by the Reichmann family and which had a book value at June 30, 1984, of £220 million.

Of the total consideration £50 million will be paid in cash from MEPC's own resources with the balance satisfied by the issue of 33·2 million new Ordinary shares.

These shares were placed in the market yesterday through Morgan Grenfell, Cazenove, Rowe & Pitman and Fielding Newson-Smith at 250p a share.

There was some criticism of the low placing price, with stockbrokers complaining that other shares were pulled down in line with the placing level. MEPC shares closed 14p lower at 257p.

MEPC's directors are forecasting a final dividend of not less than 7·5p for the year to September 30, making a total for the year of 10p a share against 9p for 1984.

English Property Corporation's investments were stated in the accounts for June 30 last year at £228·1 million, of which £162·8 million were valued by Jones Lang Wootton and the balance by Stanley Honeyman, chief executive of EPC.

The properties being acquired include the Pontings office and retail complex in Kensington High Street, West *London, and Lee House, Lon*don Wall, in the City, where planning applications have been made for a complete redevelopment of the 1950s building named after Lee Radziwill, sister-in-law of President Kennedy.

The portfolio is held principally in the United Kingdom but also includes the huge La Boursidiere office complex close to Orly Airport near Paris. Some 50 p.c. is in offices with the balance split equally between shops, industrial property and developments. Seven properties make up 70 p.c. of the portfolio.

There are tax losses of £71·7 million which MEPC will be able to utilise when it disposes of some of the properties it is acquiring.

There is virtually no dilution of assets at MEPEC as a result of the purchase. The fact that the bulk of the consideration has be met by an issue of new shares, coupled with the tax losses, only cuts assets by 12p, but the development potential at Lee House and in other properties more than compensates for the reduction in assets.

CITY COMMENT

High summer in Britain for interest rates

WHEN simultaneously the pound jumps by 3·15 cents to $1·3667 and the stock market plunges by 19·2 points to 952·0 on the FT index, then financial markets are trying to say something.

The message seems to be that British interest rates are absurdly high in comparison with the rest of the world. International bankers and investors cannot believe their luck and pile into sterling. Then industry groans as hard won improvements in international competitiveness disappear overnight.

The immediate cause of yester*day's flurries were disappointing* money supply numbers which painfully accentuated the Government's interest rate dilemma.

The most closely watched wider money measure, sterling M3, rose by 2 p.c. in the June banking month, far more than most City observers expected, which took its growth at an annual rate over the past three months to a staggering 23½ p.c. In the year to June sterling M3 expanded by 12 p.c., well above its permitted 5-9 p.c. range.

There are good reasons for thinking sterling M3 is exaggerating the looseness of monetary policy. High interest rates are attracting funds into interest bearing accounts from outside the banking system. And the figures over the past few months have been subject to a number of temporary distortions, with the Abbey Life flotation in June only the latest example.

The Bank of England has split this 60:40 between lower bank deposits and higher bank lending, on the conventional formula. After this and new seasonal adjustments the Bank suggests that bank lending may have risen by £1·4 billion in June, compared with an average of about £1·9 billion over the previous six months.

Other factors behind the rise in sterling M3 look more straightforward, with public borrowing of £700 million, net debt sales of £300 million (reduced by heavy redemptions and foreign buying of gilts), and a £400 million increase in "other counterparts" which include foreign transactions and banks' non-deposit liabilities.

Meanwhile the narrow target measure, Mo, to which the Treasury pays rather more attention than the City, rose by ¾ p.c. in June with an increase over the latest 12 months of 5¼ p.c., well within the 3-7 p.c. official band.

The message from the authorities is that the uncertainty surrounding the money figures, and what they mean for inflation, reinforces their cautious stand on interest rates.

Mr Lawson said earlier this week that interest rates would remain no higher than needed to put downward pressure on inflation. The high level of sterling, rather than the wayward antics of sterling M3, should be his guide.

In the City this action might easily be judged as having deliberately created a false market. On the facts as given in New York, Mr Bathurst would find himself censured by the relevant City body. He would almost certainly, too, be forced to resign his job.

In the art world there will be much more tolerance for Christies' actions. But Christies is quoted on the London stock exchange. The group has taken upon itself the stern obligations of the financial markets. In the circumstances, then, a statement on the matter by Jo Floyd, the chairman, would be welcome. While Mr Bathurst's action harmed nobody directly, shareholders might like some guidance about the principles involved.

Auctions and art

HOW BADLY the art market is regulated compared with the stock market is well illustrated by Christies' troubles in New York. David Bathurst, who is a main board director, has told a New York court that Christies' falsely announced that a Van Gogh and a Gauguin had bee nsold at an auction held in 1981. Mr Bathurst, who was running Christies' operations in New York at the time, informed the court that the erroneous statement had been made for the benefit of the paintings' owner and the art market in general. Mr Bathurst stated: "It may be particularly difficult to sell a painting if the whole world knows you failed to sell it at auction."

Ganging up on the dollar

STERLING'S show of strength should not distract attention altogether from the decline in the dollar against other currencies which gathered more momentum yesterday. The dollar closed slightly above its worst levels of the day in London at 2·96 marks, but this was still almost 2½ pfennigs down on the day, and the lowest since early September last year.

Across the world the story was the same with the dollar falling 7½ centimes leaving it perched on exactly 9 French francs. In the Far East too it was down 2 yen to 244.

The dollar's trade weighted average value has now fallen 10½ p.c. from its peak in March, and resistance levels are being penetrated almost daily. The currency which could do no wrong less than half a year ago can now do no right, an increasingly familiar phenomenon in the foreign exchange markets.

The "flash" forecast for second quarter economic growth is no longer giving the dollar the support it did last month, and opinions are hardening that the revised figures will again show a smaller figure which will pressure the United States' authorities to relax monetary policy still further fol*lowing the latest meeting of the* Federal Open Market Committee.

The dollar's decline has not, however, gone far enough or lasted long enough to have any quick impact on the United States balance of payments deficit, and the failure of the House and Senate Conference Committee to agree a way to reduce the Federal budget deficit is also emphasising the combination of adverse short term influences weakening confidence in the dollar.

If the slide is genuinely under way it could be a long one even if teh Fed. decides to change tack and put interest rates back up again within a matter of weeks.

HoJo still in tow

MARKET hopes that Imperial Group will be able to announce the disposal of its troublesome Howard Johnson subsidiary when its interim results are published tomorrow are wide of the mark. Imperial is still talking to prospective buyers, following the withdrawal of Marriott Corporation early last month.

Investors will no doubt be delighted that Imperial is being so diligent on their behalf in finding the right buyer at the right price. But Imperial should be aware that the City's patience is wearing rather thin — it is nine months since Imperial admitted to a wish to sell Howard Johnson — while the exchange rate is run*ning hard against the dollar.*

Spot oil prices stage a recovery

OIL PRICES bounced back yesterday after faltering slightly *when the Organisation of Petro*leum Exporting Countries failed to produce new initiatives at its Vienna meeting.

Spot prices for North Sea Brent oil were up 30 cents a barrel at $27 while Arab light, the Opec benchmark, was up 40 cents to $27, a $1 discount on the official Saudi Arabian price.

Oil purchases by refiners who held back during the Opec meeting rather than renewed confidence in the underlying price trend triggered the improvement. Refiners were forced to bid up because supplies were scarce.

Tony Craven-Walker, managing director of Charterhouse Petroleum, told a London oil conference that crude oil would trade in the $22 to $32 a barrel range over the next three years.

Institutions deny responsibility for L. Texas deal

THREE prominent City institutions are disclaiming any responsibility for the advisability of a merger proposal which could result in the takeover of loss-making exploration group L Texas Petroleum.

Kleinwort Benson and brokers Henderson Crosthwaite, who have acted for L *Texas, together with W Green*well, which with Henderson will be applying for a London listing for The Exploration Company of Louisiana if its proposed merger with L Texas is successful, all state that they have played no part in putting the terms to shareholders.

Kleinwort, with a director Peter Elwes on the L Texas board until last month, and Henderson first placed the shares with clients four years ago. The company lost more than $18 million last year.

Details of the Lousiana company include the fact that it lost more than $2 million last year and is currently involved in a grand jjury investigation. The directors say counsel advises that they will not face charges. If they were to, however, the maximum liability would be some $1 million. The documents also reveal that L Texas chairman Leslie Texas left the company last month, and was subsequently granted a consultancy agreement worth $305,000.

Dollar problems upset Wall Street

By JAMES SRODES in Washington

WALL STREET investors ignored a breakthrough in the budget impasse in Washington yesterday as trading was dominated by worries over second quarter profits and confusion over the dollar.

A sell-off in the high technology sector led the drop in the market and the Dow Jones industrial average was off 5·5 points at 1323·67 an hour before the close.

International Business Machines stock was the hardest hit, falling 2·5 points, even though the company's future earnings outlook improves with every dip in the dollar. The majority of America's large companies, including IBM, will report their April-June earnings in the next few weeks and investors expect weak profits in many market sectors.

The dollar continued to slump in New York, at one point falling to a year low of 2·9510 against the mark. The pound was boosted to $1·3630 in active afternoon dealings, up sharply from the previous day's 1·3450 rate. Traders said it appeared that European banks were the largest dollar sellers but many expect American corporations to jump into the market soon if the dollar's downward spiral holds.

The foreign exchange activity overshadowed optimistic signs for the budget deficit in Wash*ington. In an attempt to resume* the suspended 1986 budget negotiations, President Reagan agreed to a compromise that could iron out the differences in the stands of the Senate and House of Representatives on defence and social security spending.

Lankester quits Ocean board

TIM LANKESTER, the Treasury official appointed to the board of Ocean Transport & Trading has resigned following his appointment to the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

He is to be replaced by another Treasury man, David Peretz, 42, who shortly becomes head of the Treasury's Home Finance Group, the post Mr Lankester previously held.

He will be advising the Chancellor, Mr Lawson, on monetary policy.

EVEN WITH OUR HELP, A BUY-OUT MAY INVOLVE THE ODD SACRIFICE.

A management buy-out is challenging, exciting, and potentially extremely rewarding.

But we won't pretend it's easy.

The process can be long, complex and delicate. Immediate judgments can have crucial long-term implications.

And, to a greater extent than almost any other business transaction, it will involve a very considerable personal commitment.

If your attitude is realistic, you'll surely appreciate the value of a team of independent, experienced advisers, who can help you raise the finance and act for you throughout the buy-out process and beyond.

This is precisely the nature of the team of specialists in Deloitte Haskins & Sells Corporate Finance Division.

A team which has already helped the directors of many a company to achieve a successful buy-out.

Take John Edwards and his co-directors at Premier-Grip Ltd., the office products company, who wanted to take advantage of the opportunity to buy themselves out from Emhart Corporation, their American parent.

Deloittes found an appropriate source of finance and together we structured a package which was acceptable to both parties. We introduced the management team to the solicitors who completed the purchase. We reviewed the corporate plan and projections, and advised on the corporate tax liabilities to ensure that there would be no unexpected demands on the new company.

We're delighted to say that so far, Premier-Grip has achieved its projections and is moving forward steadily.

And even if the exercise may have called for a little belt-tightening, the signs are that it has been well worth while.

If you'd like to find out more about the financial, tax and management support that Deloittes can give your buy-out, call Geoff Westmore on 01-248 3913, or complete the coupon below.

More than 95 p.c. of the 34¼5 million Aran Energy shares offered by way of a rights issue taken up by holders, leaving ploration group's last minute bid for Petrolex, have been left with underwriters.

Only 1·65 million shares were taken up by holders, leaving just less than a quarter of the company's enlarged equity with the underwriter. The outcome does not affect the Petrolex bid however, now accepted in respect of 96·6 p.c. of the equity.

Nonetheless, Aran finance director described the rights issue result as "very disappointing but not unexpected." He explained that the share price had come back in line with the secondary oil market in general, falling from Irish 51p (40p) when the bid was announced in May, to Irish 36p (28p) on Monday.

The new Aran were offered on a two-for-five basis at Irish 40p (31·5p). In London, Aran closed 1p lower at 26p last night.

Bluemel

BLUEMEL Bros. has invited its bankers to appoint a receiver to the subsidiary operating its Wolston factory following the failure of attempts to restore viability and profitability there.

Sales of the original Bluemel products declined steeply in the spring and while the new ones showed considerable promise they could not carry the burden of costs in time. The problems were further aggravated by the rejection of a planning application for the sale and redevelopment of surplus land.

Meanwhile there is a first half pre-tax loss of £306,000 (loss £98,000), including an operating loss by discontinued businesses of £441,000 (loss £115,000) and again no interim. The continuing businesses, including the Ron Kitching group acquired last July, made £219,000 (£62,000).

REA

REA HOLDINGS, the commodity trading and plantations group which in February raised £2·5m with a rights issue and in May agreed to buy Applied Botanics in a deal worth £2·2m, has had another record year with pre-tax profits on from £1·29m to £2·25m.

Turnover was up £2·81m to £35·1m. Earnings show a 4·5p improvement to 14p and a 1p final doubles the dividend to 2p.

Securiguard

SECURIGUARD Group continues to make profit progress ford including Consolidated Safeguards, acquired in February, the first half out-turn is up from a restated £593,000 to £554,000.

Turnover advanced by more than £4·1m to £9·7m and earnings are up from equal to 3·4p to 5·5p.

Stirling Group

GARMENT maker Stirling Group is increasing the dividend from an adjusted 0·72p to 1·05p with an 0·65p final — in line with its policy of gradually reducing the existing high cover.

Pre-tax profits for the year ended March 31 are up from £1·50m to £1·76m and earnings from an adjusted 5·87p to 7·8p.

Sales rose from £17·2m to £19·9m. Current trading remains up to expectations, the board says.

United Leasing

UNITED LEASING has fully justified the optimism expressed at half-way—when profits rose from £1·29m to £2·05m—for it made £3·24m (£2·41m) in the second to lift the full year pre-tax outturn on from £3·7m to a record £5·29m.

Comparisons have been restated to take into account the £2·5m purchase of Sumlock Bondain in September. Turnover of this computer leasing company—largely IBM's—increased from £103·6m to £176·5m. Profits were struck after operating expenses £10·58m (£5·24m), interest charges of £1·74m (£966,000) but included investment income of £505,000 (£455,000).

Gross profits were £16·9m (£9·47m). The residual value amounted to 58 p.c. (1984 57 p.c.) of gross profit reflecting the slow-down in the IBM cycle and the change over from old to new equipment.

From earnings of 32·9p (22·5p) the dividend total rises to 3·6p (2·8p) with a 2·2p final on September 27.

Tebbit clears Burton for Debenhams bid

By JOHN RUDOFSKY

MR TEBBITT, Secretary for Trade and Industry, has stuck to his policy of looking at large takeover bids in terms of competition policy alone and decided not to call for a Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigation into Burton Group's £457 million offer for Debenhams.

Sir Gordon Borrie, the Director-General of Fair Trading, had earlier recommended there need be no inquiry. But the persistent share buying of the al-Fayed brothers, who also recently bought the Harrods store group House of Fraser, together with the long list of other companies interested in a break-up of Debenhams clouded the issue and might have led to an investigation.

Burton's agreed takeover of the John Collier chain has also been passed. Burton's finance director Michael Wood said yesterday the board was pleased the Debenhams bid could go ahead.

Today marks the second closing date for the offer. It received hardly any acceptances first time round and should not get any more now with Debenhams' share price well ahead of the offer.

What will Burtons do now? "We will make our decision today," says Mr Wood. Current terms are worth 327p a share against a market price of 384p.

City observers believe Burtons will need to raise its terms to at least 400p to stand a chance of winning. But chairman Ralph Halpern could well decide merely to extend the present offer yet again and wait for Debenhams' new property revaluation figures. Under Takeover Code rules they must be revealed by next Sunday at the latest.

However Debenhams is threatening to break the rules since it does not want to give new information if Burton does not raise its terms.

Debenhams finance director David Hillyard complained: "The rules seem to be loaded against the defender." He added: "The code is designed to see that equity is maintained but this does not seem equitable to me."

BIDS AND DEALS

W H Smith £5m Canadian deal

W. H. SMITH is to become the leading bookseller in Canada in a £5·25 million deal which gives it control of Classic Bookshops (International). Classic has 111 branches and W H Smith Canada 122 of which 79 are bookshops.

The purchase price is £1·9 million which is being met by a share issue and the rest is debt to be paid out of a C$10 million cash call on shareholders of W. H. Smith Canada.

CHAIRMEN

Time Products—Richard Laugdon: Trading in Britain for the first months of the year has been satisfactory. Sales in both retail and wholesale divisions up. In Hongkong trading going well.

Morgan Communications—Paul Morgan: Look forward to another year of significant progress.

Seapa Group—Thomas Manners: Current year has started well and the order book remains good. (Accounts show a payment of £125,000 compensation for loss of office.)

RIGHTS ISSUES

Henry Ansbacher

HENRY ANSBACHER'S £55·6 million rescue rights issue has been taken up in respect of 44 p.c. of the shares. That includes the combined 29·9 p.c. holding of the group's Brussels rescuers, Pargesa Holdings and Group Bruxelles Lambert.

Since Pargesa/GBL underwrote the issue and because they have been buying more stock and taken shares in return for cancelling an Ansbacher loan stock they end up with a controlling 69·2 p.c.

That may rise a further 5 p.c. on conversion of a loan stock.

Caparo Industries

SOME 72 p.c. of Caparo Industries' £10·25m rights issue of new 8 p.c. convertible redeemable preference shares at par has been taken up. The balance of 2·87m shares has been taken up by the underwriters.

Of this amount, Caparo Group, Surai Pauls private holding company, has taken up 2·44m shares.

COMMODITIES

STERLING'S strength undermined commodity prices yesterday, and in base metals cash copper was £9·5 weaker at £1,051·50 a tonne and cash tin closed £97·50 lower at £9,375·50 a tonne. Cash zinc was £17 down at £538 a tonne.

Coffee prices swung sharply on the London futures market. Values jumped £25 early in the day on talk of frost in Brazil but when these were discounted the rise in sterling helped push the September position down by £75 to £1,777 a tonne.

Cocoa prices, held initially by the steady market overnight in New York, dropped around £25 with September closing at £1,754 a tonne. Sugar, which is traded in dollars, showed little reaction.

THE QUESTOR COLUMN

Plessey selling over the top

HAPLESS shareholders of Plessey Company gather for their annual meeting tomorrow, already fearful that Sir John Clark will add to the aura of gloom which has enveloped the electrical sector.

Yesterday Plessey shares fell another 8p to 116, their lowest for three years. The price has more than halved from its all-time peak of 253p hit in mid-1983. Investors are understandably nervous.

It is unlikely, however, that they will hear any bad news tomorrow which they did not know three weeks ago. Sir John has already told them that the first quarter will continue the trend of lower profits seen in the closing months of the year to March.

The situation has been made worse by industrial disputes stemming from further closures of factories making the old electro-mechanical telephone exchange equipment. Seven hundred jobs are being lost in Liverpool.

In the United States the refocus of the Stromberg-Carlson business, which has lost money ever since Plessey purchased it, is taking time to stem the losses and there will be a further deficit in the first quarter of the current year.

Back in Britain, deliveries of "System X" electronic telephone exchange equipment are only just getting under way. Over the full year Plessey will probably deliver £200 million worth of System X. Little, however, will have passed through the factory gates in the first three months.

Given all that, Plessey's first quarter results will be poor with profits emerging at around £25 million when they are announced on August 15 compared with £42 million in the 1984-85 first quarter.

But for the full year the market is still pinning its hopes on pre-tax profits recovering from last year's £164 million to nearer the £176 million of 1983-84, provided the System X programme goes as planned.

The closures, including the recently announced ones, are already provided for and there are clear indications that Plessey shares on a prospective rating of around eight times earnings are oversold.

Intasun flies in face of downturn

IF ONLY every company had profits on aircraft sales to bolster a flagging trading performance.

Intasun Leisure Group's pre-tax profits as declared for the year to March 31 have climbed from £16·5 million to £24·8 million, but £11·2 million of the latest figure is attributable to profits on disposal of aircraft while another £1·9 million relates to the realisation of listed investments.

Strip those out of the comparison and profits can be seen to have fallen by 29 p.c. to £11·8 million and the group's current year forecast is also pat in a much clearer light.

Intasun has predicted that 1985-86 pre-tax profits will be similar to last year's including a boost from three further aircraft sales. These "exceptional gains" will be even greater than last year's at around £15 million implying that the underlying level of profits will be down to £10 million.

That is hardly a promising picture but it has to be said that Intasun has performed much better than the rest of the holiday sector lately. Last year it picked up market share, increasing it from 14·8 p.c. to 18 p.c., while most of its competitors lost ground.

Margins are clearly to remain under enormous pressure in the current year when the group is predicting an industry volume fall of around 15 p.c. Once again though Intasun expects to increase market share and it is pinning its longer-term hopes strongly on diversification.

On the Continent, it is pledged to two joint ventures with Ladbroke Group while in London it is involved with Ramada Inns of the United States. By the end of 1987 it expects, through the Ramada joint venture, to achieve a significant hotel presence in London. Several prime hotels in the capital are already negotiating with the company.

Intasun is also looking forward to a strong upsurge in holiday business in 1986-87, on the back of better currency rates and only modest increases in package prices. If its hopes are fulfilled the shares at 130p where the prospective multiple is around 10 should prove a good long-term buy. But there are risks. The 1984 slump in holiday traffic was not envisaged and the 1986-87 upturn could be wrecked if those companies now losing market share decide to go on the hunt next year with heavy discounts.

Reading between the lines

THE City turned Fleet Street's traditional cry "read all about it" back on Associated Newspapers Holdings after inertim results yesterday and left the shares 20p down on the day.

At face value pre-tax profits are 88·5 p.c. higher at £16·4 million for the six months ended March. But good stories always deserve to be read twice and stripped of the benefits of two accounting changes—linked with goodwill and capitalised interest—and a £1·7 million property profit, the comparative outcome at £13·5 million is £3 million shy of market hopes.

Within its core newspaper newspaper stable, the Daily Mail and Mail on Sunday had improved trends, likely to continue in the second half. But provincial newspapers only had similar trading profits and in the second half will be hit by recent industrial action from the National Graphical Association.

Magazines were brighter with Euromoney expanding its market and profits from the 13-30 Group in the United States advanced. Both are expected to make a strong second half showing.

This time last year the market took to heart the chairman's warning about competitive conditions and their impact on second half results and the shares traded narrowly for five months. Come January they took off on the year's actual outcome showing a sharp improvement in the second half.

This year there is a monastic silence, so questions about the launch of Blackfriars Oil subsidiary and property developments stay unanswered.

Investment sentiment is also not helped by price fluctuations in world oil prices. A lower interim contribution came from the Argyll field, and higher exploration expenditure will additionally weigh down second half results.

Associated Newspapers should, however, still be on course for yearend profits in the £33 million region to offer a prospective price earnings ratio at 890p of 11·5. But after such a run in the shares, best wait for year-end results before rushing in.

MONEY & EXCHANGES

THE pound surged on the exchanges yesterday as investors took the view that another poor set of United Kingdom money supply gures fiwould keep interest rates high in Britain for some time.

The pound closed 3·05 cents up at $1·3667 after touching $1·3710 immediately after the money supply announcement.

The pound was helped by a weaker dollar as well as the prospect of continued high interest rates. But it made good progress on the Continent as well, rising to 4·0550 from 4·0006 against the mark.

Ist average international value reached a 15-month high of 83·2 against 82·2 overnight.

The cost of wholesale money ended broadly unchanged in London.

1984/85 HIGHLIGHTS

| | Years ended 31st March 1985 £000 (Unaudited) | 1984 £000 |
|---|---|---|
| Turnover | 240,733 | 191,302 |
| Profit before taxation | 24,844 | 16,528 |
| Profit after taxation | 20,055 | 11,730 |
| Earnings per share | 38.8p | 22.7p |
| Dividends per share | 4.8p | 4.4p |

✻ Pre-tax profits of £24.8m (1984: £16.5m) including £13.1m exceptional profit.

✻ Final dividend of 2.8p net giving an increased total of 4.8p net (1984: 4.4p).

✻ Intasun Travel pre-tax profit £6.2m (1984: £8.7m). Air Europe pre-tax profit £5.5m (1984: £7.8m).

✻ Intasun Travel Division carried 1,063,000 passengers (1984: 820,000) at a 96% load factor.

✻ By end-June Intasun Travel Division Summer 1985 bookings totalled 675,000 which represents a 5% decrease over same period in 1984. However, late bookings are good and some growth in volume is anticipated for Summer 1985.

✻ Group Development
Purchase of Global Tours effective from November 1985. Purchase of Group's first UK hotel Barbican City for £7.5m. Formation of a joint venture with Ramada with the intention to develop a substantial presence in UK hotels. Formation of joint venture with Ladbrokes to purchase and manage Mediterranean resort hotels and the purchase by that joint venture of Cortijo Blanco in Marbella and Los Zocos in Lanzarote for approximately £10m.

✻ Prospects
Because of the increase in the unpredictability of the tour operating market and the significant diversification programme by the Group, it is even more difficult than in previous years to make any forecast. However, subject to unforeseen circumstances it is likely that the Group's profits before tax for the year ending 31 March 1986 including exceptional profits will be somewhat similar to those achieved in the year ending 31 March 1985.

United Leasing plc.

★ turnover up by 68% to £176m

★ pre-tax profits up by 43% to £5.3m

★ earnings per share up by 48%

★ net assets now exceed £17m

Besides an excellent financial performance United Leasing has achieved its objective of becoming a world leader in supply and finance of high technology equipment.

Our core business remains the supply and leasing of IBM computers to major corporate accounts, and this year we have achieved the distinction of leasing the first commercially installed 3090 "Sierra" processor anywhere in the world, costing over £4.5 million. We have also entered the microcomputer business to capitalise on the demand from our existing European corporate customers and have developed our asset financing activities to a substantial business, accounting for almost 30% of our turnover.

We are involved in business areas which, despite the inevitable peaks and troughs, continue to grow at a rapid rate. The information technology industry alone is projected to generate annual sales by 1995 which will exceed $1 trillion. Our consistent success should ensure healthy participation by this Group in a truly exciting future.

HOUSES AND ESTATES

Moving? Let the employer take the strain

MOVING house is not always a matter of choice. Managers and executives now expect to be moved by their companies at least once in a major office rationalisation; and more often in businesses such as retailing, banking or financial services where promotion usually means a new branch.

A forced move disrupts social links and childrens' schooling. It means readjustments in both working and family lives have to be faced as well as possible financial worries. The sale of the old home may be slow while the cash is urgently needed to finance the new purchase; or the move may be from a low- to a high-priced area —for example, from the North to London.

Stress

Some American research suggests that a move can be more stressful than the death of a spouse because the problems can be multiple and long drawn out.

Relocation is a growing factor of business life: last year moves by employees of the top 1,000 companies increased by 20 per cent. according to a recently-published survey from the Harris Research Centre for Merrill Lynch Relocation Management, one of several consultancies specialising in this field.

This trend is expected to continue this year. A quarter of all firms who moved more than 50 members of staff in 1984 plan to transfer even larger numbers this year.

While employers' estimates of moving costs varied widely—from £2,000 to £15,000—they are clearly becoming more aware of the role of property-related expenses. More than 90 per cent. of employers, compared with 80 per cent. in 1983, attributed over half the relocation costs incurred to the employee's move of house.

This explains the emergence here over the last decade of the American innovation of specialist relocation consultants. It is one way of taking the pain out of employment-generated moves—within, into and out of Britain.

The argument is that the employing company can thus offer its staff an efficient service. Employees, too, are happier to move—and will be better equipped for their new working environment—when freed from the delay and worry of trying to sell previous homes at a distance, or of being separated for long periods from their families.

The key ingredient is the early release, after independently arranged valuations, of a pre-agreed price for the existing property. This is financed by either the employing company or (with interest paid by the employee) the relocation consultant, who also charges the company a management fee. The consultant instructs a selected agent to sell the former home. The relocated employee, meanwhile, is free to negotiate immediately for the purchase of a new property.

Britain's—and the world's—largest consultants are Homequity Relocation Ltd, part of the U.S.-based P H H Group, who opened in London in 1978. In 1983, H R L managed 3,000 moves within the U.K.—twice as many as in the previous year—and expect to handle more in 1986.

Guarantee

As part of their expansion, Homequity last year introduced a part-exchange scheme which they run with some major housebuilders—among them Salvesen Homes, Costain and David Wilson. The idea is that a mover, whether or not as part of a relocation, can sell his existing home to Homequity at an agreed valuation to buy a brand-new property when he wants to, rather than having to wait for a sale. "We are currently being offered over 120 houses to sell a month," says Homequity's Simon Garnett.

Countrywide, a national network of estate agencies set up in 1981 by the home counties chain Mann & Co., takes a different tack. It currently operates 600 computerised branches throughout the U.K. and is currently moving several hundred employees of Thames Water.

Countrywide undertakes to buy for a guaranteed minimum purchase price within a time specified by the client company, the property of a relocated employee. Countrywide itself carries the cost of this advance (charging the client interest) until the vacated home is sold—usually, but not necessarily, through a member agent. "We completely avoid the need for company-assisted bridging finance," says the firm's Mike Lansley.

A new arrival this year is People & Property who act both for employers (mostly, so far, in moving people into Britain) and private individuals. For the latter, (about half of them British) P&P handle both sales and acquisitions on a commission basis, research destination areas or worthwhile investment prospects, and negotiate with agents. "We can usually save clients our fee through helping them to negotiate on prices," says managing director Carla Rendell Green. "The agent knows he has a better chance of a sale if we are involved."

Relocation consultants certainly have more clout than individuals when it comes to speeding up sales —and agents are enthusiastic: "It means more business," says Bill Warburton, partner in north-western agents J. R. Bridgford & Sons.

Scope for the adventurous in Cumbria

PENRITH, a Cumbrian market town of 12,300, is beckoning newcomers with a zest for a different way of life. The opportunities are visible — from disused stone barns ripe for domestic conversion, to houses with workshops, farmsteads and small hotels.

The politically independent Eden District Council points out the advantages of easy access (the town is on the London-Glasgow railway line and near the M6) in rich farming land with prices lower than the nearby Lake District National Park and Penrith's shopping centre is being redeveloped under the careful scrutiny of planners.

Two going concerns are up for sale five minutes walk from the market square. Pategill Villas, a 14-bedroom hotel with residential and restaurant licence was originally two houses, built of stone walls, rendered and whitened, under a Welsh slated roof. The A.A. and R.A.C. listed hotel has residential and restaurant licences, and a half-acre adjoining plot of land but a shortage of bathrooms. The price is £90,000. Details from Gibbings & Thornborrow.

Across the road the agents are selling a detached guest house with bay windows, half a dozen bedrooms, manicured gardens (walled at the rear) and double garage. Offers around £70,000 are being considered.

A combination of agricultural policies and farmers retiring early, has put several local farms on the market. As an example New House, a 94-acre stockrearing and feeding farm at Raisbeck, south-east of Shap, will be auctioned on Thursday next week, and is expected to raise £150,000. The farmhouse dates from the 18th century, a three-bedroom family home, with assorted outhouses. The agent is Farmers and Kidds.

Hardy types, with less capital, undeterred by building work, could carry on where the seller left off in converting a single storey barn at Sleagill, 12 miles south-east of Penrith. The accommodation could be living room and kitchen combined (22 by 16 feet), bathroom and two bedrooms. The partially completed barn is priced at £15,000. Particulars from Gibbings.

A stone barn with arched doorway is on sale for £12,000. It is sited next door to the King's Arms pub (dating from 1721) in the village of Stainton on the Lake District side of the M6, between Penrith and Ullswater. Detailed planning permission exists for converting the 66 feet long building into a house. Penrith Farmers' have the plans.

At the other end of the scale agents Tiffen King Nicholson of Penrith, are offering Thorpe Grange for £120,000. The Grange is an 18th century residence, listed as Grade II, near Lowther Park, includes a cottage and a plot of land with building permission for a four-bedroom house —nearly doubling the size of existing accommodation.

COURAGEOUS AL BAHATHRI TO CONFIRM CLASS

By HOTSPUR (Peter Scott)

TODAY'S Child Stakes at Newmarket should confirm the popular opinion that this season's three-year-old fillies are above average. Al Bahathri, the star three-year-old taking part, is expected to win, with her contemporaries providing the chief opposition.

Al Bahathri's front-running tactics have earned her successes in the Irish 1.000 Guineas and the Coronation Stakes at Royal Ascot. She also came within a short head of spoiling Oh So Sharp's unbeaten record in the 1,000 Guineas.

Her courage was specially in evidence at Royal Ascot, where she almost lost her footing on the bend but recovered to continue racing with zest.

She needs to reproduce, if not exceed, her best form if she is to win at today's weights.

Bella Colora, only a short head behind her when third in the 1,000 Guineas, now receives 3lb. Bella Colora's well-beaten fifth in the Oaks can be forgiven because she palpably failed to stay that distance.

Ever Genial, fourth to Al Bahathri at Royal Ascot, is among Henry Cecil's three runners. Another is Fatah Flare, who also likes to force the pace and won the Musidora Stakes at York. A minor injury caused Fatah Flare's subsequent withdrawal from the Prix de Diane (French Oaks).

Talented opposition

Free Guest and Brocade are very talented four-year-olds in today's field. Both won important races last season, Brocade beating some smart colts in the Challenge Stakes at Newmarket and Free Guest making the Sun Chariot Stakes her fourth consecutive win.

They ended last year with honourable defeats in the Prix de la Foret and Champion Stakes. Both ran well at Royal Ascot recently, Free Guest finishing fifth to Rousillon in the one-mile Queen Anne Stakes and Brocade fourth to Dafayna in the Cork and Orrery Stakes.

Today is the anniversary of Al Bahathri's first success in what is now the Cecil Boyd-Rochfort Maiden Stakes. Her owner, trainer and jockey can win again with Shujun, who ran with promise in the same Ascot June race that attracted Al Bahathri 12 months earlier.

Bakharoff and Atall Atall are Royal Ascot winners tackling the Anglia Television July Stakes. Bakharoff looks much superior but he could face tough opposition from Water Cay and Green Desert.

Green Desert was a promising second at Newmarket in late-May to Sure Blade, who went on to win at Royal Ascot. Water Cay has looked very good in two easy Doncaster wins and I fancy him to upset Bakharoff.

Slaney, a lightly raced colt who won with ease at York last month, is napped for the Duke of Cambridge Handicap.

Dick Hern's luck has now changed with a vengeance and his winning run should continue with Khozdar in the Kennett Maiden Stakes.

Sheikh Mohammed, Khozdar's owner, has two other Kennett Stakes runners. Royal Harmony, the more obvious danger, represents classic form. This colt, fourth in Shadeed's 2,000 Guineas, could not act on very soft ground against Damister at York in May and then became too upset before the Derby to do himself justice.

Hern's changed fortunes will make him very hopeful of a good display by Helen Street when Willie Carson's mount joins Dubian (Pat Eddery) and Sally Brown (Walter Swinburn) in the English challenge to six Irish fillies, headed by Alydar's Best, in the Irish Oaks on Saturday.

Michael Stoute reports that the off-colour Shadeed is still suffering from a spotted skin and it is impossible to make plans for his reappearance.

Robert Sangster has sold his sprinter Committed to Allen Paulson, an American patron of Dermot Weld. She will run in tomorrow's Norcros July Cup at Newmarket, and be ridden by Michael Kinane, who lost the mount at Royal Ascot to Brent Thomson.

BAKHAROFF BEST OF THE DAY

By Our Course Correspondent

GUY HARWOOD, who came close to winning the Anglia Television July Stakes in 1980 with Recitation, may go one better with BAKHAROFF* in the corresponding event (3.40) at Newmarket today.

Harwood described the $450,000 yearling by The Minstrel as "a nice class horse" after running away with the Chesham Stakes at Royal Ascot last month.

Bakharoff faces stern opposition from Water Cay, the Henry Cecil-trained hat-trick seeker who has impressed with two victories at Doncaster.

Harwood saddles Brocade for the Child Stakes (3.5), but she may find the free-running Fatah Flare and Al Bahathri, more than her match.

Khozdar, threequarters of a length behind Supreme Leader, the Derby fourth, in the Wood Ditton Stakes in April, is fancied for the Kennett Maiden Stakes (4.45), and Ypsilantis may defy top weight in the Clare Handicap (5.15).

Fortune favouring Hern and Carson

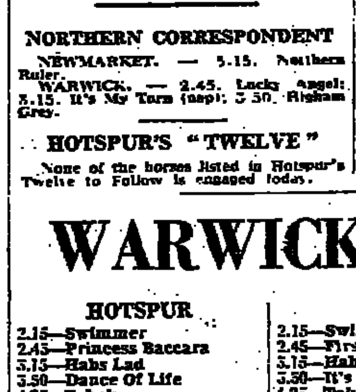
By MARLBOROUGH (John Oaksey)

THE Princess of Wales's Stakes has long been one of Dick Hern's favourite races and by winning it in style at Newmarket yesterday, Lady Beaverbrook's Petoski underlined in gold the progressive return to form of the great West Ilsley yard.

Willie Carson, the stable jockey, began the day by winning the Piper Champagne Maiden Stakes on Aeschylus, whom the major trains for Lord Porchester.

Khaled Abdulla's Tremblant, trained by Ron Smyth, helped Carson to a treble in the Ward Hill Bunbury Cup, so after one of his slowest starts for years, the former champion must now feel that things will soon be back to normal.

Twelve months ago Head for Heights gave Hern his fifth Princess of Wales's Stakes in 11 years, but to fancy Petoski as a sixth one had to forget the Derby, in which he finished nearer last than first, about 26 lengths behind yesterday's odds-on favourite Lanfranco.



Tremblant, right, is too good for El Mansour.

Fast ground helps

Before that, on the other hand, Petoski had run Law Society, the Epsom second and subsequent Irish Derby winner pretty close at Chester. That was much more the form he reproduced yesterday, helped no doubt by faster ground and a flatter terrain than Epsom.

Lanfranco never took control of this race as he did at Goodwood and Royal Ascot. Crazy, on his first outing since last year's St Leger fourth, was always snapping at his heels.

Two furlongs out Crazy went past, looking at that stage much the most probable winner, but although Carson had been hard at work for some time, he was beginning to get results.

In top gear Petoski is a formidable galloper and after mastering Crazy, who still covered himself with glory, the further Petoski went the further he won.

Major Hern, partially paralysed after a hunting fall last winter, is improving steadily and can walk short distances unaided. He says that provided Petoski comes through the race all right and the ground stays fast, he will almost certainly take his chance in the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Diamond Stakes, which he so nearly won for Lady Beaverbrook with Bustino.

Well-named after the Greek dramatist (by Troy out of Melodrama) Aeschylus had run well first time out and the seven furlongs here helped him to wear down Mashkour by a neck, with the favourite Samarid five lengths further back.

Henry Cecil, who trains Mashkour, had no time to wait for consolation when Tussac turned the Chesterfield Stakes into a procession.

Fastest two-year-old

There is no telling how good Tussac may be but he was still not yesterday's most promising two-year-old. That honour went to Storm Star, who dwarfed her opponents before the Pritchard Services Cherry Hinton Stakes and won in fast time.

The only slight worry about this beautiful Storm Bird filly's second victory was that she ran very freely for the first two furlongs. Bruce Raymond wisely did not pull her about and when Piggott challenged on stable-companion Chalk Stream, one light flap was all Storm Star needed.

Ian Balding, who calls Storm Star "the fastest two-year-old I have had for a long time", does not expect to run her over more than six furlongs this season. Some ridiculous prices were mentioned for next year's 1,000 Guineas but this is not the moment to give publicity to such foolishness.

Carriage Driving

GREGORY TO LEAD BRITAIN

By ALAN SMITH

PAUL GREGORY will lead Britain in the first World Pairs Driving Championship, sponsored by Norwich Union, at Sandringham (Aug. 29-Sept. 1).

Gregory, from East Lothian, won the dress rehearsal international pairs competition in Rome two years ago which gave Britain the right to stage the championships.

Richard Smith and Fred Pendlebury, who are first and second in the present league championship for pairs drivers, ahead of Gregory, complete the team.

Drivers who have taken part in four-in-hand championships are excluded from the pairs, which opens the way for less-experienced campaigners such as George Bowman junior, son of Britain's most successful carriage driver.

Great Yorkshire Show

Morgan & Topper back to peak form

By HENRY BIRTWISTLE

IAIN MORGAN and Dun Topper came through an eight-horse jump-off to win the first of three major Midland Bank-sponsored show-jumping championships when the Great Yorkshire Show opened at Harrogate yesterday.

Morgan, the young Scot who has been bringing on horses for Peter Robeson since last season, nearly lost Dun Topper after a violent reaction to an influenza vaccination early this year.

He has been nursed back to health but did not contest his first major competition this season until the Royal Show last week.

Jean Germany opened yesterday's barrage on Whisper Grey with another clear round in 42·60sec, and Alan Fazakerley was faultless again on Rebound.

With the £600 prize firmly in his sights, Morgan saved vital seconds from a tight turn into the water before galloping home clear in 41·72sec.

Toulson four-timer

Vin Toulson won his fourth Great Yorkshire Ridden Hunter Championship in a row when the middleweight Fireworks Night, lightly shown this season, followed in the footsteps of Assurance in 1982 and dual winner Elite.

It was a close thing, with judges Richard Meade and Anthony Steward pondering long and hard before placing Fireworks Night ahead of Seabrook.

MIDLAND BANK UT YORKS CH'SHIP: I. Morgan's Dun Topper 1; DAF Trucks' Whisper Grey, Miss J. Germany, 2; Mrs G. Rhodes' Rebound (A. Fazakerley) 3.

RIDDEN HUNTERS.—Ltwt: Miss J. Gelder's Purdy. Middlewt: Mr & Mrs J. Rhodes' Fireworks Night & champion. Hvywt: Mrs J. Dewar's Seabrook & reserve. 4-Y-O: J. Wright's Beaver Point. Nov., under-15st: Musta Horse Clothing Co's Larkrise. Over 15st: Mrs E. Lithman's James Bond.

HUNTER QUITS AS TRAINER

Gavin Hunter, 44, the Berkshire trainer, is to relinquish his licence. He said yesterday: "The financial problems are too great. The horses go to either the young trainers or the top 12, and I am left in the middle."

Hunter, who has had four winners from his 34 horses this season, added: "Enough is enough. I am now going into sports promotion. I've got several ideas and these also involve horse racing".

NINE IN OAKS

Dilley speaks victory

Surrey v Kent

COWANS BLOW BUT MIDDLESEX HEAD TABLE

By DAVID GREEN at Northampton

MIDDLESEX moved to the top of the County Championship table, taking 24 points from their 141-run win over Northants who, seeking 366 for victory in four hours, were bowled out for 224 with 16 overs remaining.

Northants' task was almost impossible on a wearing pitch. Wayne Daniel again made the early breach and thereafter Phil Edmonds (four for 81 and nine for 130 in the match) and John Emburey (three for 23) made sure Middlesex's prey did not escape.

The one blot on Middlesex's day was that Norman Cowans damaged his left hand while fielding and will probably miss today's match against Nottinghamshire at Lord's, as will Gatting, Edmonds, Emburey and Downton through Test match duty.

Northants v Middlesex

Middlesex, resuming their second innings yesterday morning at 62 for two, already 204 runs ahead, needed to score quicly. But both Gatting and Butcher their not out batsmen, left early driving expansively at Capel.

Then Radley and Downton, hitting the loose ball hard and scurrying between the wickets, made admirable unbeaten half-centuries. They put on 126 runs in 26 overs and set up the lunch-time declaration.

Spiteful lifter

Northants made a brisk enough start. Larkins, undisturbed by an early let-off when Cowans dropped him, on the third man fence off Daniel and split the webbing between his fingers in the process, again played some handsome offside strokes.

Cook also looked comfortable until Daniel had him caught at second slip from a spiteful lifter. When Daniel had Larkins caught at first slip two overs later, Northants' hopes of avoiding defeat rested largely on Lamb's shoulders.

Lamb ondrove crisply for a while but Edmonds, getting generous turn, bowled him as he played back defensively. Emburey then had Bailey caught off bat and pad and bowled Capel and Edmonds caught and bowled Williams off a full toss.

Northants were now 95 for six and when Daniel had Harper caught at cover and Boyd-Moss, after 53 overs of obdurate resistance, was caught at short mid-off, Northants' cause seemed utterly lost.

Mallender, however, sliced Daniel cheerfully through and over the slip cordon and Ripley resisted pluckily until Edmonds had him caught at slip. There was time for Mallender to complete a maiden Championship fifty before Emburey had Walker caught behind.

Arnie Sidebottom . . . the long way round for Test recall.

SIDEBOTTOM TAKES THE LONG ROUTE

ARNIE SIDEBOTTOM, the Yorkshire pace bowler, travelled for four hours between Gloucester and Maidstone yesterday, unaware that he had been called into England's squad for the third Cornhill Test against Australia, which starts at Trent Bridge tomorrow.

By the time Sidebottom left Gloucester, after Yorkshire had collected the 13 runs they needed for victory in the first few minutes of the day, he was already being sought by Lord's.

The selectors wanted him to replace Neil Foster, the Essex fast bowler, who has withdrawn with a back injury.

Sidebottom motored happily away from Trent Bridge—and it was not until he arrived in Yorkshire's hotel for their next match that he was told his venue was Nottingham.

Bit of a shock

Sidebottom was made 12th man at Lord's and then dropped for the third Test. He said: "I had no reason to turn on the radio during the car journey, so everything has come as a bit of a shock.

"It's great to be back in the squad after being left out at Lord's and I only hope I can get a game this time and do myself justice."

Sidebottom immediately set off for his Yorkshire home to collect fresh gear for the Test before joining the other England players at Nottingham this afternoon.

BOTHAM CHASES RECORD

By MICHAEL AUSTIN at Taunton

IAN BOTHAM moved to within striking distance of the record for sixes hit in an English season before Leicestershire frustrated Somerset's well founded victory ambitions at Taunton yesterday.

Leicestershire, seeking 273 in three hours, closed at 192 for eight, adding an 11th draw in twelve games to their anomalous season in which they are unbeaten but stand bottom of the table.

Somerset v Leics

Botham's busy schedule involved a mixture of off-spin and seam bowling after his unbeaten 50 off 30 balls had swept Somerset to a declaration of 248 for five.

His innings included the remarkable ratio, even for this extraordinary cricketer, of a four and five sixes, which raised his total to 48 in first class games this summer.

Steward struck

With a maximum of 22 innings remaining, Botham is challenging the all-time record of 72 sixes struck by Arthur Wellard, another Somerset player, 50 years ago.

One of Botham's sixes had painful consequences for an unsuspecting steward, who was struck on the shoulder.

Another flew over the old pavilion stand and fell just short of the distant main gate but anti-climax followed Botham's salvo, which was launched in the absence of Richards, who had mild food poisoning.

Willey, with 80, including 14 fours in 100 minutes, played reputable strokes yet Leicestershire could not establish a base from which to challenge the target, despite the friendliness of full tosses from Booth.

The dismissal of Willey, Briers and Clift in consecutive overs enforced stern and successful defence from Garnham and Cook, though Marks returned four for 63 and match figures of 11 for 208 on a dry pitch assisting his off-spin.

Anxious Hants dig deep for victory

By ALEX PETERS at Liverpool

HAMPSHIRE were forced to dig deep into their renowned batting resources and finally called on the painfully lame Gordon Greenidge before defeating a spirited Lancashire fightback at Aigburth yesterday.

Victory by four wickets sustained Hampshire in their three-way duel with Middlesex and Gloucestershire at the head of the Championship.

But it did little for the nerves of Mark Nicholas, their anxious captain.

Greenidge wearing dark glasses after a recent blow in the eyes and limping desperately, played the hero's role with 22 not out.

Lancashire v Hants

However, Hampshire would not have wanted to have chased many more than their target of 166.

It is Nicholas's view that 10 wins may well be enough to secure the title this year and this engrossing match provided Hampshire with a fifth success at the halfway stage.

Furious pace

When the Lancashire collapse ran its course yesterday morning, the last four wickets falling for 52 to the pace of Marshall—who struck twice in successive balls before being warned for intimidation—and the spin of Maru, the result seemed in little doubt.

Even with Greenidge still nursing a sprained ankle, it looked only to be a question of how long it would take Hampshire to make the runs. At 42-3, however, it was time for reassessment.

Allott, working up a furious pace, removed Terry and Robin Smith in a high class spell of aggressive new ball bowling and suddenly Hampshire were on the back foot.

Nicholas and Hardy attempted nothing rash or flashy, carefully adding 60 on a pitch by now showing signs of wear helpful to Lancashire's three spinners.

When Folley finally induced a misjudgement by Nicholas and then took a diving return catch just as Marshall was threatening to settle things, Greenidge hobbled out with Terry as his runner.

His first shot indicated the level of his discomfort but, although his mobility was restricted, his technique was intact.

Despite losing the admirable Hardy after tea, Greenidge took Hampshire home with 90 minutes to spare.

Dilley spearheads fine victory by Kent

By MICHAEL MELFORD at the Oval

KENT continued their progress up the Championship table from 16th place with a handsome victory yesterday over Surrey who, reduced by injuries, were outplayed in all departments and beaten by 176 runs.

As in the first innings, it was Graham Dilley, bowling accurately and if anything faster than before his long absence, who broke the back of the Surrey batting.

In his opening spell of nine overs he removed Butcher, Needham and Jesty and he came on again in mid-afternoon to end an obdurate partnership between Ward and Richards.

Surrey v Kent

He ran up smoothly, if too far for most tastes, generally sustained a good full length and finished with five for 53.

Kent batted on for five overs in the morning before leaving Surrey needing 370 in 97 overs. Without a sound start which was not forthcoming, this was always likely to be beyond them, but their effort was enlivened by a whirlwind innings by Lynch.

Twenty in over

Coming in at 53 for three, he was soon driving Ellison for three fours in an over. In the next over he hit Jarvis for 20, hooking him twice, driving him square on the offside and then straight for six.

In the first four overs of his partnership with Pauline he made 45 out of 50 before reducing the pace as he approached lunch.

After lunch he found it harder going against Underwood and Baptiste, but he had made 66 in 53 minutes off 39 balls when he was well caught off Baptiste by Knott diving to his right.

Though Richards stayed on after his stand with Ward, Surrey's cause was beyond saving and when he eventually drove Jarvis to mid-on, Baptiste added to the long list of fine catches which Kent had held in the match.

Younis & Davies defy Notts victory march

By MICHAEL CAREY at Swansea

A QUIETLY controlled innings of 81 not out by Younis Ahmed frustrated Nottinghamshire's bowlers at St Helen's yesterday after Glamorgan's early batting had faltered for the second successive day.

Needing 280 from what would have been 67 overs they were reduced to 63 for five, which would be a surprise to both sides on this pitch, but in the 37 overs remaining Younis and Davies made few errors in staging the match-saving operation.

Both illustrated that while quick scoring might not have been without hazards on such a sluggish surface, survival was not unduly difficult, all of which Nottinghamshire would have taken into consideration in making their eminently reasonable declaration.

Glamorgan v Notts

This came after Robinson had completed his second century of the match—the first time he has achieved the feat—and figured in an unbroken third-wicket partnership of 188 in 45 overs with Randall.

Fluent progress

Once the new ball had lost its hardness both were able to make fluent progress without attempting anything extravagant, although Robinson twice drove Ontong for straight sixes, one out of the ground, in reaching three figures from 153 balls.

A good start and an end to Miandad's lean spell were Glamorgan's requirements but neither materialised after Jones had been bowled offering no stroke to the third ball of the innings.

Holmes was then well picked up at slip by Hadlee off Saxelby, in whose next over Miandad followed his first innings failure by being bowled off a mixture of inside edge and pad.

Morris played well but all too briefly and after exhibiting good footwork to drive the spinners was well caught and bowled by Such, whereupon Ontong was caught behind in the next over from Cooper.

But, unsurprisingly on this pitch, not a lot else happened to encourage Nottinghamshire and while Davies looked well organised against both pace and spin Younis began to play some good strokes through the covers and off his legs.

If a bat-pad chance off Hadlee at 45 had gone to hand Nottinghamshire might have had an end to bowl at; as it was the sixth-wicket pair saw out the day having added 110.

Essex baulked by Gilbert onslaught

By D. J. RUTNAGUR at Chelmsford

ESSEX'S ninth-wicket pair of David East and Neil Foster whose injured back has forced him out of the third Test, resisted for the last 17 overs, yesterday, to deny the Australians a win.

Having themselves collapsed rather ignominiously in the morning against Graham Gooch, who took four of the last five wickets for 23 runs, the Australians retaliated through Dave Gilbert, the young pace bowler, who turned in a performance to match Gooch's.

Taking four wickets in his second spell of nine overs — the last three in 21 balls — Gilbert reduced Essex from 40 without loss to 66 for five and, besides raising the prospect of a win for the Australians, could well have earned himself his first Test cap.

Essex v Australians

Seizing the five remaining Australian wickets in little over an hour, Essex had at least 60 overs in which to get 204 on a pitch which stood up well to four days' play.

Superb catch

Gooch was quickly into his stride. He cut and drove five fours to score 27 and then succumbed to a superb slip catch by Boon off Gilbert who had switched ends to bowl with the wind.

In the first over after lunch, Gilbert induced a fatal snick from Prichard. In his next over, McEwan pulled fecklessly at a ball not short enough and was leg before. Then Gilbert had Pringle with a beauty that lifted from just short of a length and Matthews toppled Gladwin.

Gladwin, too, was lbw, missing a pull at Matthews' quicker ball. With an hour and three quarters left and the score 84, Lilley swept the off-spinner for a catch to Wessels, positioned just behind square.

Hardie, who took 55 balls to get into double figures, and Phillip halted the collapse to an extent where Essex felt secure enough to mount an offensive. Philip struck three fours in one over from Matthews and the 20 overs of the last hour began with Essex needing 85.

Thomson recalled

Thomson was recalled at this stage and in his first over, snared Hardie with a change of pace. In his third, Phillip let fly with an off drive but he leaned back as he struck the ball and holed out to extra cover.

Foster came out at No. 10 with an open brief. Trying initially to maintain the assault, he was missed at extra cover off Matthews and then abandoned aggression. However, he still gave another chance in the very last over, at silly point, off Bennett.

LETHBRIDGE AND SMITH HOLD OUT

By REX ALSTON at Hove

IN a good finish at Hove Warwickshire earned a brave draw with Sussex. Set to score 291 in 70 overs they lost six wickets for 159 with 14 overs left.

After Sussex had scored 228 for two with Mendis 111 not out, Imran, le Roux and Colin Wells had Warwickshire tottering before Smith and Lethbridge saved the day by adding a further 27.

In the morning Mendis and Green continued their successful overnight partnership and enlarged Sussex's advantage. Mendis passed his 50, though in not quite such masterly form as he progressed towards his third century of the season.

Sussex v Warwick

Just before he reached it, he lost Green, who completed another skilful display as opening batsman. He has matured since last season, but this time he hit across a straight ball.

Sussex then needed quick runs for an early declaration and Parker was just the man for the job. He went for everything, hitting four fours, and a six off Gifford who was so exasperated that he bowled a bouncer down the leg side. Humpage managed to catch it; but the umpire called a wide.

So the gallant Mendis who had been the mainstay of the innings was left not out having served Sussex nobly.

During the lunch interval the morning sun disappeared to pose problems for the Warwickshire openers facing Imran and le Roux. The ball moved about off the pitch and Barclay packed the slips, but Lloyd and Dyer bore charmed lives and one catch was spilled.

Furious burst

Change of bowling brought relief to harassed batsmen who took the score to 99 before Lloyd drove a low catch to mid-off. Kallicharran was well caught by the keeper on the leg side and when Dyer was bowled, Warwickshire's challenge petered out.

Imran, in a furious burst — three for four in 18 balls — from the sea end disposed of Humpage and Amiss and Sussex were in with a chance. But Smith found a sturdy partner in Lethbridge and the Imran storm was weathered.

WRIGHT 117 ENGINEERS SHOCK WIN

By MIKE BEDDOW at Worcester

DERBYSHIRE claimed an unexpected victory when they scored 335 to beat Worcestershire by three wickets with eight balls to spare at New Road yesterday.

The result went against the trend established in the first two days, both in terms of Derbyshire's overall performance in the match and the nature of a pitch which had previously restricted strokeplay.

Worcester v Derby

Yet Derbyshire, apart from a late flutter when Illingworth turned the ball, made relatively light work of their task, ruining all the calculations of Neale, the Worcestershire captain, in a second-wicket stand of 195 between Wright and Anderson.

Superb Rhodes catch

Worcestershire actually bowled an additional over before Illingworth introduced a note of drama with four wickets, beginning when Anderson was superbly caught off his boot by Rhodes for 94, made in almost four hours.

Wright, who registered his first century of the season for 170 balls, then gave a return catch to Illingworth and two wickets in consecutive deliveries by Kapil maintained attention until Derbyshire scrambled their second championship win in succession.

Neale, 71 not out overnight, decided from the outset that he would leave Derbyshire 85 overs batting. The equation eventually amounted to almost four runs an over when he was out after completing his third century of the season in 182 balls.

Two wickets for Russell

Worcestershire added 70 in an hour, Neale and Weston taking their partnership to 100 before the rush to a declaration resulted in two wickets for Russell, 41, the Derbyshire coach brought out of retirement for his first championship match in six years.

The game began to drift out of Worcestershire's control for a number of reasons. They did not bowl as well as in the first innings, Derbyshire batted considerably better, and Kapil dropped two slip chances off Wright.

Even then, the pitch, a little variable in bounce, was expected to be Worcestershire's escape valve. It was not because Derbyshire made a positive start and were untroubled when McEwan, 23, dismissed Barnett for the second time in his championship debut match.

Anderson, a successful deputy for the injured Hill in recent games, gave the innings a good base and sensibly allowed Wright to eat into the target when Derbyshire's requirement was 169 from 58 overs after tea.

Malvern College lift Colts Trophy

By Our Schools' Cricket Correspondent

MALVERN COLLEGE won the final of the Lord's Taverners Cricketers Colts Trophy at Edgbaston yesterday with three overs to spare on a day when batsmen were always in charge.

R G S High Wycombe timed their innings to perfection. Openers M. Dodds and P. Shayler started steadily then accelerated with lusty blows to the leg side boundary.

S. Ali (57) carried on the good work to take High Wycombe to a formidable 197 for seven after their 40 overs.

Malvern took charge when captain G. Lunt (92 not out) and J. Wileman (56), their second wicket pair put on 152 runs.

Wileman left with nine runs needed for victory and Lunt scored the winning boundary with a magnificent on drive.

Quick wickets

Tonbridge bowled out Wellington for 196, R. Owen-Browne taking four for 35. In reply J. Longley (93) and S. Pollington (67), the Tonbridge openers, put on 121 in 26 overs, and the target was reached in 42 overs with three wickets down and an over to spare.

N. Riley scored 100 not out for Stowe and the declaration was made at 173 for two against Colchester RGS who, on a perfect batting wicket were 120 all out.

Against Berkhamsted Colchester RGS declared at 205 for five, with Peek and Jordan putting on 96 for the third wicket. Berkhamsted started well but when P. Brown (45) was dismissed they faltered and, at 145 for eight, settled for a draw.

After a good opening stand of 88 between M. Sewell and P. Hanson the Oundle middle order collapsed to 117 for six, Uppingham off-spinner M. Cooke taking three quick wickets. Then a stand of 68 enabled Oundle to declare at 215 for seven.

Uppingham batted soundly but were never in sight of their target and at the close were 175 for two in the drawn match.

Clifton, after a good start, failed to cope with the accurate medium pace of O. Davies (6-20) and were all out for 116 against Cheltenham, who collapsed to 98 for nine. The last wicket put on 20 runs, though with J. Tucker on 43 not out to win the match.

Alleyns struggled to 128 all out against some steady Wellingborough bowling and then attacked the target. A fine innings of 77 from opener A. Mabbutt saw them home by seven wickets.

After losing by five wickets to Portsmouth GS, Charterhouse were bowled out for 125 by Bradfield, who went on to win by six wickets.

Kimbolton batted well against the Perse and declared at 207 for four, G. Kerr making 113 not out. The Perse reached 127 for three.

In a low scoring match Llandovery were dismissed for 79 and Brecon won easily by seven wickets, while St Edmunds Canterbury had an easy win against Duke of York's when, after declaring at 210 for four, they bowled out their opponents.

Millfield retained the Barclays Bank Under 17 Schools' Cup at Norbury in South London yesterday, beating Bishop's Stortford College by seven wickets.

L. Fishpool (53) was the mainstay of Bishop Stortford's 131 all out, and I. Smith (43) top scored in Millfield's 133-3. Four hundred schools began the 45 overs a side competition, and Manchester G S and Lutterworth Upper School were the other semi-finalists.

SLANEY THREAT TO PULL OUT OF BUDD RETURN

By KEN MAYS

MARY SLANEY, the American who clashed with Zola Budd in the Olympics, has threatened to withdraw from the rematch in the Peugeot Talbot Classic at Crystal Palace on July 20 unless the Olympic rules are enforced.

Mrs Slaney is insisting that the first four past the post on the night are tested for drug-taking and has stressed that she will not be taking part unless she gets her way.

Mrs Slaney was upset when she head second-hand that Maricia Puica, the Rumanian Olympic champion, had been admitted to the 3,000 metres races.

She is prepared to run only if all the runners agree to the test at the Grand Prix meeting, at which only random tests are called for.

Expensive event

The meeting of the three is speculated to have cost United States and British television around 300,000 dollars with the athletes' share around 200,000 dollars, although it is said that the British runner is on the lion's share.

Brad Hunt, Mrs Slaney's agent, said: "She certainly was not happy when she found at Puica had been added after Budd had been well beaten by her in Helsinki. It has been handled badly all round."

Mrs Slaney married British discus thrower Richard Slaney after the Olympics and her husband said: "I don't think Mary against Budd was a match. e have no arguments with her and we certainly do not worry about her."

Mrs Slaney showed that she is in superb form for the meeting when she was just outside he United States record when she beat Britain's Kirsty McDermott in the 800 metres at the Mardyke in Cork last night.

Led throughout

Mrs Slaney, who set her record at Gateshead two years ago, the last time she ran the event, led throughout and when the British record-holder made her challenge on the final straight the American moved up a gear to win in 1min 57·68sec with Miss McDermott recording 1min 57·88 sec.

Mrs Slaney, the double world champion who runs in Paris on Saturday, said afterwards that she did not feel that she had been extended to her limit and intended to reach her peak next month when she runs in the I A C meeting at Crystal Palace.

Sydney Maree, the South African born American, ran the fastest mile in the world this year when he recorded three minutes 52 seconds.

Maree, who had expected to get nearer Sebastian Coe's world record, was thwarted by poor pacemaking and was then pushed to the line by the U S-based local man Marcus O'Sullivan with the New Zealander John Walker third.

Angela Tooby, from Bristol, timed her finish perfectly in the 3,000 metres when she overtook Monika Joyce and Carole Bradford to win in eight minutes 59·68 seconds.

Lincoln Asquith, from Birmingham, the joint fastest 100 metres runner in Britain, showed his ability at 200 metres with a runaway victory from a line-up that included his Birchfield team-mate Ainsley Bennett.

David Smith, from Hull, who had six no-throws at Birmingham a tthe weekend, finished third in the hammer with 73·90 metres but the winner was world record-holder Yuri Sedykh, of the Soviet Union, with 82·14 metres.

Ray Flynn, of Ireland, proved much too strong for Britain's Mike McLeod and Tim Hutchings in the 5,000 metres when he took the lead with 200 metres to go and easily held off their challenge.

Coe pulls out

Sebastian Coe has pulled out of the 1,500 metres event at the Kodak A A A's Championships at Crystal Palace at the weekend.

The Olympic champion has not recovered from a virus infection which laid him low after his last race at Birmingham, nearly three weeks ago. He said: "I hope to be fit enough to run in the Talbot Games at Crystal Palace later this month."

Coe's withdrawal—only a few hours after it was announced he would be running—is a further blow to championship officials who are already struggling to sell tickets for a meeting which is significantly short of world-class athletes.

Only Steve Cram and Willie Banks, America's new world triple jump record holder, possess qualities likely to draw the crowds.

Jacklin has double aim at The Belfry

By MICHAEL WILLIAMS

IT was quite like old times, yesterday, as Tony Jacklin came strolling in off the golf course at The Belfry, Sutton Coldfield, where the Lawrence Batley international begins today, airing his views on this, that and the the other.

It is not too often, these days, that one sees Jacklin with his golf clubs and this will be his first tournament of the year on the European circuit.

His only other event was the Nigerian Open back in February and now he has dusted down his clubs for two reasons; he needs practice for the Open Championship at Royal St George's next week and wanted another close look at The Belfry, where he will be non-playing captain of the European Ryder Cup team against America in September.

At 41, a birthday he celebrated last Sunday, Jacklin has returned from serious tournament golf, but remains a favourite and always a most approachable player.

Tight lies

His views on the golf course were eagerly sought and it is his opinion that this is very definitely a course on which Europe can win, principally because of what he calls its "element of unpredictability."

As in the past, Jacklin again finds the fairways very hard and with a lot of tight lies. It is not easy to control even the pitch shots," he said. This was particularly true in yesterday's wind — he hopes it will blow, too, in September.

Jacklin has not forgotten a remark made to him by Peter Oosterhuis a year ago. "Don't worry about the course, Tony," said Oosterhuis. "It will drive the Americans nuts."

For all that, Jacklin is most complimentary about the efforts that have and are being made to bring this controversial venue up to scratch. "It's coming along fine," he said and, unlike Sandy Lyle, did not criticise rough that is, in places, so deep that in two practice rounds Philip Parkin has lost nine balls.

New facer

Lyle, with eight successive tournament rounds in the 60s behind him, must nevertheless be the logical favourite this week in the absence of Ballesteros, Langer and Faldo who because Lawrence Batley refused to pay appearance money, could not be tempted to play.

Among new faces is Tze-Ming Chen, elder brother of Tze-Chung, who led the US Open for most of its four rounds; among older faces are Graham Marsh and Bob Shearer.

There is, too, for some, the added incentive of 10 faces in the Open Championship field without the necessity of prequalifying. But those vacancies are available only to those who, unless already exempt, finish in the top 25.

PORTSMOUTH DEFEND

By BILL MEREDITH

MORE than 300,000 people will visit the Royal Tournament, which starts at Earl's Court, London, tonight (7.30), during its 17-day run which features one of the great sporting spectaculars of the year—the Royal Navy Field Gun Competition.

The competing teams in this tough test of strength, teamwork and timing are Portsmouth, Devonport and the Fleet Air Arm. Portsmouth, last year's winners after a tremendous battle with the Fleet Air Arm, are determined to hang on to their hard-earned crown.

There will also be top-class fencing, which will culminate in the Armed Services Master Swordsman Competition and a Combined Services v All England match. Various exciting equestrianism events will be a feature of the final week, including the Horse and Hound Show jumping competitions.

The first performance of the Royal Tournament was at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, in 1880. One event, in those days, was called "Cleaving the Turk's Head". This was open only to Yeomanry officers, who galloped at an effigy of the head; and slashed at it with a sword.

Nothing so barbaric will be seen at this year's Tournament, which opens with a colourful showing of St. George and a quite realistic, fire-breathing dragon and has a grand finale of pride, pomp and pageantry, to celebrate the 300th anniversary of many great British regiments.

EXPULSION FOR REBEL JENKINS

By JOHN PARSONS

BOB JENKINS, 41, Britain's best-known lawn tennis umpire, has been expelled from the British Tennis Umpires Association after criticism of fellow-umpires, other officials and Wimbledon in newspaper articles.

Jenkins, who said last night he had been expecting the decision, indicated that he would not be taking advantage of the 30 days in which he has to appeal.

The domestic ban is likely to be followed by the removal of his international certificate by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council and he is unlikely to receive any more Davis Cup appointments.

There will, no doubt, be support for Jenkins in some quarters, for he has been a first-class umpire. He is the only man to have umpired successive Wimbledon finals, in 1981 and 1982. He also umpired in two Davis Cup finals. But his ability is not the issue.

Gravely viewed

Public criticism by umpires of others in the game is one of the cardinal sins so far as the B T U A and the M I P T C are concerned, and understandably so.

Jenkins who, last December, was sacked as the L T A's Grading and Training Officer for what was said to be his abrasive attitude, admitted that he broke the rules by criticising Wimbledon referee Alan Mills, and M I P T C supervisor Ken Farrar, in one of the articles.

This was written after he had been suspended from officiating at Wimbledon because of remarks in an earlier article during the championships when he called for stiffer penalties against leading players who step out of line.

Few would argue with those sentiments. An umpire, however, is the last person who can go into print on the matter and still be sure of retaining the confidence of the players.

Action inevitable

A further article last Sunday, which he must have known was flouting the rules, made some form of official action inevitable.

Mr Jenkins says he has no plans to set up a rival umpiring organisation, as happened when there was a previous rift involving a leading British umpire.

He claims that with a secret ballot at an annual meeting he would be reinstated, but my soundings among many of his colleagues indicate sadness that his career should be ending this way, rather than any deep anger over the decision.

Fruitful forecast for Apricot

By DAVID PELLY

WITH all but two of the competitors in the City of Plymouth Round Great Britain and Ireland race having completed the first stage there is every sign that the second, from Cork to Barra in the Outer Hebrides, will be much speedier.

Tony Bullimore, skipper of the overall leader, Apricot, said yesterday that the weather forecast of north-westerly Force 4 winds backing to south west and increasing were "the best presents we could possibly have."

He is obviously hoping that the 60-foot Apricot, which was due to restart the race at 8.35 p.m. last night, will be roaring up the west coast of Ireland while many of his rivals are still sitting in port waiting impatiently for the end of their compulsory 48-hour stopover.

This will certainly apply to the largest yacht in the race, Peter Phillip's 80-foot catamaran Novell Network-Virgin Atlantic Flyer.

A broken halyard shortly after the start has cost them dear, for after putting into port for repairs they were becalmed for hours and finally reached Cork in 32nd position, a clear 24 hours behind the leaders.

Anxious moments

The first bad weather will give some anxious moments to Mike Whipp, skipper of the 60-foot trimaran BCA-Paragon, which is lying just one minute behind Apricot.

In a series of tune-up races in the Solent recently she proved slightly faster than Apricot but had to retire when a strengthening web inside the main crossbeams began to delaminate.

Her designer and builder, Adrian Thompson, quickly repaired the damage but there must be some worry that the trouble could strike again.

Multihulls are leading in every class except the Class. II, in which there are none entered. There were excellent performances by the French catamaran, Macallan-Festival de Lorient, and the two Danish trimarans, Quickstep and Magic Hempel.

Interesting entry

Macallan-Festival de Lorient is a most interesting boat, being the first of a new class of sporty, lightweight 40-footers that is being promoted in France as an alternative to the huge expense of the maxi-multihulls.

Pierre le Maout and Antoine Poulikuen sail this boat, like an Olympic Tornado, frequently flying the weather hull, and unles sthey break something or turn her over, she loops unbeatable in Class V.

Hinault boosts claim to yellow jersey

By PHIL LIGGETT in Morzine-Avoriaz

BERNARD HINAULT, of France, and Luis Herrera, of Colombia, were the angels of the Alps during the 11th stage of the Tour de France yesterday when they fled the pack as soon as the race entered the mountains and were never seen again during an excellent day of competition.

Hinault, the overall leader, increased his hold on the yellow jersey to four minutes when he finished seven seconds behind Herrera at the ski station of Morzine-Avoriaz to end an exhausting ride of 121 miles from Pontarlier.

The opening day in the Alps came after 1,227 miles and 10 days of the marathon had been completed, and Hinault could not contain his enthusiasm, attacking immediately once the race left the flatter roads around Lake Geneva.

On the first climb, the Morgins Pass (4,527ft) which carried the riders back into France, Hinault and Herrera went ahead to lead by more than a minute at the top of the 10-mile climb. Scotland's Robert Millar crossed the summit in fourth place behind Pedro Delgardo of Spain.

Millar thwarted

Millar, who still hopes to retain the mountain title he won last year, was in a perfect position to counter the early attack on the pass, but was unable to answer the savage acceleration by the two leaders when they broke clear.

Earlier, the Scot, had been obliged to stop with Pascal Simon, his Peugeot Cycles team leader, who eventually finished the stage after making four bicycle changes following a crash.

Excellent eighth

On the Col du Corbier (4,052ft), Millar struggled to finish seventh, one minute 54 seconds behind the two leaders, but a fine rally on the giant finishing climb to Avoriaz (5,971ft) gave him an excellent eighth place on the day.

Herrera won all of yesterday's climbs, courtesy of Hinault, and the Colombian now has a clear lead in the mountains competition. Ireland's Stephen Roche also improved to third overall after he finished sixth at the ski station.

In the women's Tour de France, Mandy Jones, from Rochdale, finished an excellent fifth at Avoriaz following a most difficult 35 miles from the alpine town Chatel. Miss Jones improved to third overall, but over six minutes behind the new leader Maria Canins, from Italy, who won yesterday.

Yachting—J24 Championship

Hodge faces stern task after penalty

By TONY FAIRCHILD

BRIAN HODGE, seeking with Luder to notch his fourth successive title, was first across the finishing line for the second race in a row as the J24 National Championship resumed in a lively south-westerly off Brighton yesterday.

Having won the second race on Monday afternoon, Luder was again a convincing pacemaker in the third heat which began almost an hour late after two general recalls.

But Luder, steered by Eddie Warden Owen, faced a 20 per cent penalty because of a pre-start collision with Mother (J. Ware), another leading title contender in the series sponsored by Hydro-Dynamic Products.

The Luder crew — whose quartet, including Jim Saltonstall and Andrew Hemmings, were named as Yachtsmen of the Year in January — acknowledged their guilt in the port-and-starboard incident by flying Code Flag I.

Prolonged duel

The penalty incurred by Luder, involved in a prolonged duel with the Eddie Warwick-steered Sanjola IV (John Adams) at the start of yesterday's race over an Olympic-type course, means that Hodge faces a stiffer task in retaining the title in the series, which resumes today with a long-distance event.

Tony Watts, who is chief measurer for International Yacht Racing and is the principal race officer for the J24 event, was hoping yesterday to set the fleet of 29 yachts a course today which will keep them racing for between six and seven hours.

Mr Watts will be hoping for a breeze as steady as that which gave crews such an excellent race yesterday, when there were only a couple of significant shifts, as Luder came through to take the lead on the second weather leg.

Sanjola IV, whose crew came together only three weeks ago, had led by 12 seconds from Luder at the first weather mark, with Mijay (L. Wride) Third at that stage.

There was only one change in the first 10 at the end of the first triangle — completed in less than an hour as the breeze freshened to around force three — with Brian Radcliffe's Out of Sight coming through to take 10th place.

Indeed, after Luder, the performance by the Radcliffe yacht was perhaps yesterday's outstanding one. Steered by Mike Hobson, a naval architect working for Bruce Farr in Florida and who returned to Britain for the J/24 series, Out of Sight eventually finished fourth.

It was only the resolve of Ian Fourworth, the 470 sailor, steering Jacko (M. Lawlor) which halted the progress of Hobson's charge.

PROVISIONAL RESULTS. — 3RD RACE: Luder (B. Hodge) 1; Sanjola IV (J. Adams) 2; Jacko (M. Lawlor) 3; Out of Sight (B. Radcliffe) 4; Jaisolf (L. Meade) 5; Mother (J. Ware) 6.

HUGHES IS IN LEAD WITH 348

By LESLIE HOWCROFT

MARINE "Spike" Hughes, from the Royal Marine Amphibious Training Unit at Poole, moved into the lead in the Naval Queen's Medal Shoot at Bisley yesterday, when a score of 175 out of 200 brought his running total to 348.

This put him two in front of the reigning champion, Marine Colin Humphreys, with Chris Privett, of the Navy, dropping from second to third.

One of the Navy men, C. P. O. Peter Hobson, of Portsmouth, who was fifth the previous day, accidentally damaged part of his rifle and dropped out of the running.

ENGLAND'S TOUGH TASK

By CHRIS MOORE

WITH 13 matches in 22 days — including six Test — the England party which left for Australia yesterday faces one of the most demanding programmes ever devised for an overseas tour.

Four uncapped players—David Knott, Nick Gordon, Nick Clark and Ian Jennings — are included in a party which features only five of the Los Angeles Olympics bronze medal squad.

The wisdom of adding this tour to an already crowded international programme has already been questioned but Colin Whalley, the England manager, remains optimistic that it will give the less experienced players a valuable taste of international hockey.

England's strength will once again in Ian Taylor in goal and Sean Kerly, the top Great Britain goal scorer in Los Angeles. The England management will also be keen to see how the injury-prone Imran Sherwani stands up to the demanding tour.

Test matches are in Tamworth (July 18), Canberra (July 21 and 23), Melbourne (July 25 and 27) and Perth (Aug. 4). There are seven other matches against State and representative sides.

Tour Party.—I. Taylor (East Grinstead), J. Hurst (St Albans), D. Faulkner (Slough), R. Dodds, D. Craig, N. Clark, Jennings (Southgate), D. Faulkner, J. Duthie, J. Shaw, S. Kerly, I. (Guildford), N. Gordon (Arms), M. Grimley (Brooklands), R. Clift (Hounslow), N. Hughes (Wakefield), I. Sherwani (Stone).

RICHARDS TAKES SINGLES

By Our Bowls Correspondent

WYNNE RICHARDS, the Merthyr Tydfil-born England singles champion, added the Gateway British Isles singles trophy to the ever-increasing collection on his mantelpiece by beating Ian Gillen, of Ireland, 21-7 in the final at Worthing yesterday.

Conditions were almost ideal, with sunshine, warmth, a pleasant green and packed stands wherever one looked.

But there was one little hazard which Richards overcame in the England final last August and which was unknown to Gillen, a tricky wind.

The "Worthing Gap" is a special pathway where the wind breaches the green and this causes variations, not only end-to-end but also hand-to-hand for variables in all.

Experience the key

Richards revealed he had already mastered it. He also rated highly the importance of experience—of "having been there before"—in winning and this showed in his consistency.

Their final encompassed 17 ends, 12 of which he won for an average of 1¾ shots per end. Gillen achieved 1·4 but his varying form prevented him from winning more than five ends.

So Richards became the star of the day, though closely chased by Robert Weale, also Welsh-born but still living in the Principality. Skip to his brothers Brian and David and their father Bill, Robert fell to the teenage brothers Laurie and Peter Pull, Russell Morgan and Chris Paice, of England, in losing the 3½ hours fours final 23-19.

Unabashed and certainly unweakened in stamina, Robert produced some magnificent bowling to beat the brilliant lead Brett Morley, of England, 21-9 in the British Isles under-25 singles final in the afternoon.

Singles Final: England (W. Richards) bt Ireland (I. Gillen) 21-7.

Junior Singles Final: Wales (R. Weale) bt England (B. Morley) 21-19.

Pairs Final: Ireland (H. Dunlop, K. Hogg) bt Wales (G. Evans, M. Dadey) 27-16.

Triples Final: England (G. James, L. Bromfield, P. Bromfield) bt Ireland (T. Johnston, T. Smith, K. Hogg) 13-12.

Fours Final: England (L. Pull, R. Morgan, C. Paice) bt Wales (Bill Weale, D. Weale, Brian Weale, R. Weale) 23-19.

COUNTY MATCHES. — Somerset 130, Hampshire 87—Suffolk 109, Kent 132—Northants 132, Middlesex 113. Women: Worcs 131, Somerset 93.

Jamie. Born deaf, blind, mentally retarded and physically weak, the two-year-old seems destined to be locked for life into his unnatural, solitary confinement, unless his devoted parents can devise some way of communicating with him. I wonder if it is entirely accidental that this film has quite so many shots of Jamie temptingly held just inches above the water? Despite its four awards from the Eighth International Wildlife Festival at Missoula (whose renown, I imagine, spreads throughout the length and breadth of the town), this study of the coyotes of Yellowstone Park is a scruffy, poor affair not particularly well filmed and made worse by an American commentary that refers to "vocalisations" and "generalist predators."

9 00 Ms RHYMNEY VALLEY 1985—This last part of Karl Francis's film triptych of his native Welsh mining community is intimate, revealing, repetitive and over-long. Having quickly established that Rhymney and neighbouring valleys even in their death throes will never seek absolution from Mrs Thatcher (Mussolini may have been marginally more loved), the film mines the same old seams. It also fails to distinguish between action and re-enaction. It does, however, yield a potential media star, in local Labour Party chairman Abe Roberts, a Welsh Andy Capp.

BENN DEMANDS 'HARD LEFT' MANIFESTO

By VALERIE ELLIOTT Political Staff

MR ANTHONY WEDGWOOD BENN, yesterday again embarrassed Mr Kinnock and other Labour leaders by releasing a policy document outlining the issues he believes will clinch a Labour victory at the next general election.

Mr Benn and Mr Arthur Scargill were blamed by the party leaders last week for losing the Brecon and Radnor by-election for Labour, by calling for an amnesty for all miners convicted of all offences during the coal strike.

But yesterday, with Mr Eric Heffer, left-wing MP for Liverpool Walton, Mr Benn put forward a series of suggestions for party policy many of which will furtner widen the rift between the hard left and Mr Kinnock.

Nationalisation of the banks, re-unification of Ireland, abolition of the House of Lords, restoration of full employment, and sweeping defence cuts are among the policies suggested for Labour's next election manifesto. They are included in a paper to be put before this month's meeting of the party's national executive.

'Socialist alternative'

Mr Benn, MP for Chesterfield, and Mr Heffer want to ensure that the manifesto is based on definitive socialist principles and say the executive should prepare a new and comprehensive policy statement for submission to the 1986 party conference.

They say: "The electorate know very well that a formidable task of reconstruction will need to be undertaken by the next Labour Government and they will want to be sure that we have thought out how we propose to tackle it and in particular how we intend to respond to, and overcome, the opposition that we are likely to have to face.

"Labour's best chance of victory lies in its appeal to all those, especially the organised working class, who are deeply opposed to monetarism and militarism, and to millions of others who do not bother to vote because they cannot see any difference between the parties.

"Such people would be more likely to respond to a serious Socialist alternative that offered jobs, homes, education, good health, dignity in retirement, the prospects of peace, greater human rights and domocracy—backed up by a readiness to will the means as well as willing the ends."

Import control

The paper sets out 16 policy ideas which Mr Heffer and Benn would like to see as the core of the manifesto. Their points include:

FULL EMPLOYMENT: "This will involve us in a substantial shift of power from market forces towards criteria that allow the needs of our people to be given priority.

"We shall have to reckon with the opposition of those national and international centres of economic and industrial power that now control our economic life.

"The introduction of exchange control, import control, the direction of investment in the private sector, much more progressive taxation and the redistribution of resources to secure greater equality in our society could meet with strong resistance."

COMMON OWNERSHIP: "Urgent consideration to be given to common ownership, in various forms, of the banks, the financial institutions, of a substantial number of major companies to secure the investment we shall need, and of land for housing and development, as well as the requisition of privatised assets without paying twice for them."

TRADE UNION RIGHTS: "The repeal of the anti-trade union legislation, the granting of an amnesty, and its replacement by new laws that encourage trade union membership and safeguard the rights of unions to protect their members and play a full role in all decisions which affect them."

DEMOCRATIC SELF-MANAGEMENT: "A genuinely democratic system of self-management entrenching the ultimate right of employees in public and private industries to elect and remove their managers."

COMMON MARKET: "The immediate restoration — pending our liberation from the Treaty of Rome — of full parliamentary control over legislation ceded by the 1972 European Communities Act to the EEC.

EDUCATION: "The provision of a genuine comprehensive system of education and training throughout school and college and in all further and adult education."

WELFARE: "The rebuilding and reconstruction of the Welfare State by the provision of a whole range of statutory benefits covering all kinds of social need to available as of right, to replace the present means-tested system."

IRELAND: "The violence in Northern Ireland, caused by partition, can only be resolved by negotiating the termination of British jurisdiction in the Six counties."

FOREIGN POLICY: Britains should "play a major role in peace-making, especially in Europe," and support political liberation and economic development in the Third World.

RELATIONS WITH U.S.: There should be "a critical reappraisal of our relationship with the Americans if, as is quite possible, they were actually to refuse to remove their nuclear weapons from British soil."

DEFENCE: Major cut in defence expenditure. "We shall not be able to afford the present cost, let alone an increase in the conventional arms budget taking up any savings deriving from the ending of our nuclear weapons programme."

MACHINERY OF GOVERNMEUT: The Civil Service, the public sector, the law and the police "have now become instruments of Tory policies staffed at top levels with Tory apointees . . . All will need to be reformed and made fully accountable.

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM: The House of Lords, "which after a short honeymon period will do all it can to delay, obstruct and prevent an elected Labour Government from carrying out its mandate," should be abolished.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT: Establishment of a new basis which would give general power to authorities to act in the interest of their constituents.

DISCRIMINATION: "Outlaw all forms of discrimination on the grounds of class, sex, race or faith."

MEDIA: "The preparation of plans to safeguard the freedom of the media so that a full range of opinions can be made available to the people."

'Middle way' mocked

By JAMES WIGHTMAN Political Correspondent

MR Kinnock, Labour leader, yesterday claimed that Britain was seeing the beginning of a new phase in Tory thinking over public expediture with Cabinet Ministers wanting the electorate to think that "the wolf was really grandma all the time."

He told a party rally in Plymouth: "The Tories under Mrs Thatcher have spent 10 years scorning and squashing public spending.

"Now they want everyone to believe that they are suddenly proud of everything they have detested for a decade.

"We have a new era—the age of Social Toryism. It is a time when Cabinet Ministers move from denouncing public spending as the work of the devil to claiming credit for increasing public spending and all its good works."

Mr Kinnock cited as his main evidence the weekend speech in which Mr Lawson, Chancellor, said that the Government's spending policies were "the middle way."

He added: "Tories boasting of public spending generosity are like gardeners holding prize weed shows or anglers having boot catching competitions."

Despite the Alliance victory in the Brecon and Radnor by-election, only Labour could displace the Conservative, he said.

The Tories were "setting themselves up with a big fat bankroll to be given away in Britain's biggest ever vote bribe before the next General Election."

He hasn't enough to drink, but the little he has is killing him.

After years of drought, many old people in Third World Countries are caught in a tragic dilemma.

On one hand, the shortage of water threatens their lives. On the other, what little water is left is contaminated and unsafe to drink.

Even though there are often sufficient underground water reserves to solve the problem, the old are still dying. Simply because the reserves cannot be reached.

It can cost as little as £650 for Help the Aged to provide a well. Providing water for an entire village—sometimes 1,000 people.

Please give generously. Because when you give fresh water to the old, you give them new hope.

Alliance to show united front

By Our Political Staff

THE Alliance leaders yesterday acted to maximise their support following the Liberal win at Brecon and Radnor and in preparation for a strong campaign at the next General Election towards the formation of a single, united front.

While the question of single leadership is not an issue, both Mr Steel, Liberal leader, and Dr Owen, SDP leader, recognise the vital need to bring the two parties much closer together to tackle their next joint election campaign.

A strategy committee was created yesterday to oversee all aspects of Alliance strategy, closer policy-making, and fund-raising efforts.

It was also decided that outside advisers would be included on the committee so that they could play a key role in the run up to the next General Election rather than be concentrating on winning a seat themselves.

Although no joint office will be established, the work conducted by the joint offices will become more co-ordinated.

Third force

Officials in both parties realise they must now fully exploit their upsurge in popularity in order fully to make a mark as a third force in politics.

The idea of a more united Alliance and with the two leaders appearing jointly on more occasions has been mooted for some months. Now key figures are determined to capitalise on the present situation at once.

After a two-hour meeting in the Commons yesterday Mr Steel and Dr Owen issued a symbolic joint statement:

"The Brecon and Radnor by-election has revealed the disunity of the Conservative and Labour parties. Mrs Thatcher's Cabinet is split between consolidators and cutters: between the do-nothing brigade and those who want to cut everything in sight, taxes and services.

'Left resurfaces'

"Mr Kinnock's brief period of harmony is over as the Left resurfaces. He has no choice but to follow the drum of Arthur Scargill and wave goodbye to the courageous Nottinghamshire miners.

"By contrast, the success of Richard Livsey has strengthened the unity of the Alliance.

"We are determined to offer the electorate a fresh choice as a unified and indivisible third force practising the partnership that we believe the country needs to recover its strength and unity.

"We have therefore today ensured that our Alliance will be effectively preparing our policies, plans and presentation for the next two years. We propose to establish a much closer integration of strategic and campaign planning, both local and national, and of our own joint appearances and activities."

BULLIES BAIT NEW BOY

By GODFREY BARKER

THE Liberal colossus of Brecon, Mr Richard Livsey, strode into the Commons yesterday to tinkling Alliance cheers and a vast ruminative silence from the major parties.

He looked rural. He sported a navy blue suit and brown shoes. He stooped—as tall chaps must when squeezing cow's udders.

"Ere today, gone tomorrow!" chirped Mr Dennis Skinner (Lab. Bolsover), as Mr Livsey marched up for the Oath. "Bird of passage!"

The Liberals bellowed, as best possible. It sounded like cub scouts blowing out a birthday cake. Mr Skinner drowned them with ease. Mr Livsey had been warned not to look at him. He scratched his name immortally onto the roll.

Mr Steel, Liberal leader, took his luck with a swing at the Prime Minister over Mr Livsey's famous victory. He was on good ground.

Strangely, the Iron Lady sounded sober and defnsive yesterday, as well sshe might. She can hardly open a newspaper these days without finding Mr Brian Walden and other pundits ranting at her to sound less "strident."

Tory moans

So yesterday, with Tory moans mounting, the Commons loudspeakers were turned down and Mrs Thatcher projected a silvery caring coo over the BBC.

It must have soothed budgerigars everywhere and all of you in search of something calm before Choral Evensong. To those in the Chamber, her melting ripostes were only half-audible.

In political terms, it was disastrous. Mr HHattersley was up and running at her, Mrs Thatcher compassionately refrained from kicking him all over the shop, which is what she is good at. So he did it to her.

The sooner, one sense, the PM abandns this night-nurse with the candle act and returns to ordinary natural ferocity, the better.

Mr Steel thus put her in a dilemma. He piped out insultingly that only last Tuesday the PM had joked forward to welcoming a Tory as Brecon's new boy.

Shirt trousers

"Yesterday she dismissed with contempt some of her colleagues as 'flexitoy.' Have they not been proved right? How would she describe the people of Brecon now that they have spoken for Britain?"

Mrs T. rose slowly. She could be seen suppressing, with difficulty, her normal urge to swing Mr Steel by his short trousers into the chandeliers.

She thought of all you caring millions out there yearning for her to show mercy. She fawned towards the Bar and the waiting Mr Livsey. "I congratulate the winner of the Brecon and Radnor by-election on his victory," came out a still, small voice.

"I note, though, that the tenure of Liberal and SDP members tends to be short," she murmured, tempering her rudeness with charity,"—as my Hon. Friends the members for Sutton and Cheam, Ripon, Croydon NW and Crosby" (all former Liberal triumphs, now Tory) "Will tell you."

She sat down remorsefully. One sensed caring tears rolling down cheeks across the nation. Had she hurt poor David? Not in those frames.

The ghastly sensitivity to the media of those who rule us emerged moments earlier in the Lords, which is due to end its six-month experiment (read disaster) with television this month.

Viscount Whitelaw revealed that their lordships are thinking about the "temporary continuance" of television (i.e. to Christmas). If the Commons votes for it in November, in other words, the Lords don't want to be left out.

Some peers lust for publicity. They'd move the Woolsack if the BBC asked them. Will they never learn?

worth. It was in an affidavit in this case that Mr Bathurst revealed Christie's false sale announcement.

Three New York dealers said yesterday that they did not believe the outcome of a single sale would have dramatically changed the impressionist art market. But Mr Richard Feigen told the NEW YORK TIMES that him sell a Van Gogh the false announcement had helped him sell another Van Gogh. "The fact that there was aprobably justified price helped me," he said.

'VERY UNUSUAL' Rivals' denials

ALISON BECKETT writes: At Christie's in London Mr Bathurst, the son of the late Viscount Bledisloe, said: "It was a very unusual situation. I would not like you to think this happened a lot."

The firm's major London rivals, Sotheby's and Phillips, said they would never "under any circumstances" claim an item to be sold when it was not.

Proposals from dealers ranged from a call for an investigation into auction practices by a Commons select committee, to the suggestion that reserve prices should be announced announced before bidding.
